WE GET THE SHOW ON THE ROAD.

"Dirty Rotten Scoundrels" Mon., Feb. 14th - $155 pp.

Two con men with conflicting work habits compete to control the action in the French Riviera. But who's conning whom? Who will be the first to swindle a young woman out of $50,000? Based on the film of the same name. Starring John Lithgow and Norbert Leo Butz. Includes orchestra ticket, dinner at Giambelli's 50th Restaurant and deluxe round-trip transportation.

"Beauty and the Beast" Wed., Feb. 23rd - $130 pp. [kid-friendly show]

See this Disney classic about a young woman who meets "the Beast," who in reality is a young prince whose lack of compassion has him trapped in a spell placed by an enchantress. Will he learn his lesson or be doomed as a "beast" for eternity? Come and see the show! Package includes orchestra ticket, lunch at Bubba Gump Shrimp Company and deluxe round-trip transportation.

New York Knicks vs. Philadelphia 76ers Thur., Feb. 24th - $91 pp.

Come see the New York Knicks take on the Philadelphia 76ers at Madison Square Garden. Game time tips off at 7:00 p.m. Package includes round-trip coach transportation and game ticket. Call for complete itinerary and details. There is no smoking or alcohol permitted on board the motorcoach.

"Little Women" Sat., Mar. 5th - $165 pp. [kid-friendly show]

A new musical version of the classic novel by Louisa May Alcott, which tells of the March sisters, coming of age in Civil War era New England. Starring rising star Sutton Foster and Maureen McGovern. Sutton plays Jo March, who dreams of becoming a writer and finds unexpected love. Package includes orchestra ticket, lunch at Becco's (of Lidia's T.V. show fame) and deluxe round-trip transportation.

Philadelphia Flower Show "America the Beautiful" Sat., Mar. 12th - $65 pp.

Join us for the Philadelphia Flower Show, with an "America the Beautiful" theme. Package includes admission to the flower show and deluxe round-trip transportation. Call for complete itinerary and details.

"Riverdance" — Radio City Music Hall Thur., Mar. 10th - $175 pp.

Thrilling audiences around the world with their incredible performances, this entourage of dancers will give a spectacular show for all to enjoy. Package includes orchestra show ticket, dinner at Giambelli's 50th Restaurant and deluxe round-trip transportation.

New York Knicks vs. Miami Heat Tues., Mar. 15th - $91 pp.

Come see the New York Knicks take on the Miami Heat at Madison Square Garden. Game time tips off at 7:30 p.m. Package includes round-trip coach transportation and game ticket. Call for complete itinerary and details. There is no smoking or alcohol permitted on board the motorcoach.

"All Shook Up" Wed., Mar. 30th - $140 pp.

This musical comedy set in 1955 features 24 legendary Elvis Presley classics. All Shook Up is a non-biographical revue about a mysterious leather-jacketed guitar-playing stranger that leads a small town to discover the magic of romance and the power of rock & roll. Package includes front mezzanine show ticket, lunch at the U.N. Delegates Dining Room and deluxe round-trip transportation.

Atlantic City Thur., Mar 31st - Fri., Apr 1st - $135 pp., single occ., $95 pp., double occ., $90 pp., triple occ. Join us at the Borgata Hotel Casino and Spa in Atlantic City for an unforgettable overnight trip. Package includes $10 in coins, one welcome beverage voucher for day of arrival, breakfast voucher, tax and deluxe round-trip transportation. We must have the names for each person. Also, verify smoking or non-smoking room.

Monty Python's "Spamalot" Wed., Apr 6th - $155 pp.

An adaptation of the 1975 film telling the legendary tale of King Arthur and the Knights of the Round Table and the quest for the Holy Grail in song, this production features a chorus line of legless knights, men in tights, killer rabbits and sexy dancing divas. Stars include Tim Curry, David Hyde Pierce and Hank Azaria. Directed by Mike Nichols. Package includes orchestra ticket, lunch at the U.N. Delegates Dining Room and deluxe round-trip transportation.

Exercise Your Right to Choose.

Create your own membership during our February Fitness Drive—just $44.95 per month—$49.95 with pool privileges!

At OmniHealth & Racquet Club we know that everyone's needs are different, especially when it comes to fitness. Now, in addition to offering a huge selection of equipment, classes, personal training, two pools and more—we've begun our February Fitness Drive—making it easier than ever for you to make a commitment to your fitness goals by giving you the option of choosing the length of your membership. It's as easy as 1-2-3!

- ❶ Decide how many months you are willing to commit to your fitness program... from 3 months on.
- ❷ Multiply by $44.95. For our pool membership, add another $5 per month.
- ❸ Stop in, ask for a membership associate and see why we're the Hamptons' most complete health club... then sign up!

But our February Fitness Drive is only good from Tuesday, February 1st until Monday, February 28th. So don't wait, because there's no time like now to get started on a new you.

Protest Cancelled

An Ad, A Salesman, A Reporter, A Protest, A Cancellation

By Dan Rattiner

Late Monday morning, ad salesman Tom Ratcliffe came into my office here at Dan's Papers because, he said, he had something important to tell me.

"I got a call from somebody at another local newspaper who wanted to talk to me about a quarter page ad in Dan's Papers. I'd sold the ad. And since the call came to me in the sales department, I figured I was talking to somebody in their sales department. We often call one another. Sometimes the copy for an ad is sent to the wrong newspaper. Or the client wants to run in both newspapers, but sends the copy to only one of them. So you have to get the copy from the other.

"Anyway, I'm talking to this guy, and after awhile, he asks me what I think of the ad."

"What ad was it?" I asked.

"It's for the New York Mortgage Center."

I'd seen it when it came in. A quarter page ad. They want to sell mortgages, but the copy is kind of sophomoric. There's a photograph of an attractive, naked woman, shown from the rear, and there are references in it that they are telling you the "bottom line" about mortgage rates and that "you can pay more for your loan...butt why?" Not the way I would sell a mortgage. But it's a big world out there.

"So I told him it was not my cup of tea," Tom said, "and there was no accounting for tastes, and he said 'would you mind if I quote you?' And that's when I realized I was talking to a reporter. They were doing a story about this ad. And I told him absolutely not to quote me.

I did.

"Would it be okay if he called you?" the editor asked.

"Sure," I said.

And so he did. This reporter told me he was doing a story on all sorts of different ads and, though he saw nothing wrong with this ad in Dan's Papers, his wife did. "She thinks it's demeaning to women. And it should never have been allowed to run. Especially in this time when women are grieving about the children who have been lost in the tsunami.

"How do you decide if you should run an ad?" the reporter asked.

"I pay attention to community standards. There's a line below which you don't go. We don't take sex phone ads for example. And we don't allow foul language or pictures that are lascivious."

"And this picture of a butt isn't lascivious?"

"It's a beautiful photo of a nude woman's torso, as seen from the rear. Could have been by Scavullo or Avedon."

"And the language?"

"Butt and behind are pretty low, but they are in common usage. Ask a seven year old. You

Butt and behind are pretty low, but they are in common usage. Ask a seven year old.

He should talk to you as the spokesman for the paper. And you could decide what you want to say."

"Hmmm," I said.

I decided to call the editor of this paper, who I have met once or twice, and ask him to speak to his reporter. The rules of the game are that you identify yourself BEFORE you start asking questions, not AFTER. And after Tom left, wouldn't say that's below the line."

And then I said something I might regret. But I was getting a little annoyed at this point.

"As for this business about the tsunami. There are all sorts of people with all sorts of points of view. Someone might get offended if you publish a photo of a woman wearing a string of pearls on Pearl Harbor Day. But that's not community standards. And you have to make these decisions when you run a newspaper."

Two days later, late in the afternoon, I was in New York City at an appointment for this paper. The office was calling me on my cell phone.

"We just got a call from Channel 12," the receptionist, Ali, said. "They got something off the AP wire. Apparently a minister is busing out people to demonstrate in front of our office against the New York Mortgage ad. It's happening tomorrow."

"That's ridiculous," I said.

"That's what they said. When are you going to be back?"

"In the afternoon tomorrow. Here's what I want you to do. Call the police and tell them we've learned there might be demonstrators. Where the hell are they going to demonstrate?"

"We don't know. The whole front lawn is under three feet of snow. And these huge drifts cover the shoulder of the highway. They'd have to demonstrate in the street. Or in our driveway."

"They can't block the street. And I don't think they can block our driveway. If they come, take pictures of them. Especially their signs. And no interviews by anybody."

"Don't say anything?"

"If it's a substantial number of people, more than five, say, give out a press release that says we did not think this ad was unacceptable for any community newspaper. But in light of the demonstration, we will rethink our position. And give out my cell phone number."

Things involving civil rights or political standards, I stand up for the first amendment. With shifting sexual standards, I'm easy.

But it really seems to me that community standards are moving rapidly toward the right. Maybe I am being left behind. Well, I'll catch up. Ever since Janet Jackson's wardrobe malfunction, there's been this big crackdown. And huge fines levied on broadcasters (for saying the word "—" for example.) Howard Stern, who is certainly under the line, in my opinion, but was once protected by freedom of speech laws, has been banished from public airwaves. Now they are bleeping out re-runs of children's cartoon shows where somebody says a bad word that was fine to say when it originally ran five years ago.

On Thursday morning, I was in a taxicab in New York City telling this story to a friend when I saw an advertisement on the roof of another cab passing us. It was for a TV show. The ULTIMATE FIGHTER, it said. And under it, a line read "All those who participated in making this program have been injured. Friday midnight. SPIKE TV."

For some reason, what came to my mind was a slogan from World War II. THE ONLY GOOD JAP IS A DEAD JAP. When the attitude toward sex tightens, the attitude toward violence loosens.

I have been witness to three big swings in the ethics and morals of America in my lifetime. When I was a boy, we were in a wartime situation, both after World War II and then the Korean War. You couldn't say the word "s—t" in the movies or on television. I don't even think you could say the word butt. You couldn't show a man and a woman in a movie sleeping in the same bed, even if they were married. And when Clark Gable said, "Frankly, my dear, I don't give a damn," it caused a sensation.

By the 1970s, you could see hardcore X-rated movies at the theaters in Westhampton Beach, Southampton and East Hampton. It was an anti-war time. Make love, not war. Flower

Gardiner's Island and its windmill remain, anyway

Gone

The Last Word From The Late 16th Lord Of The Manor

By Dan Rattiner

There's been considerable excitement this week about all of the valuable antiques from the Robert David Lion Gardiner house in East Hampton being auctioned off at Christie's. Selling prices in many cases are more than triple what Christie's expected.

There are maps from the eighteenth century, antique armoires from the nineteenth century, silver service from a renowned eighteenth century silversmith. In addition to private collectors around the country vying for these pieces, the museums and libraries throughout the Hamptons are bidding on things. The collection is so large, the auction will go on, intermittently, for months.

What's completely been overlooked in all of this is the impact this will have on the Hamptons. This is not just some old family selling off all its stuff. This is the end of the oldest family dynasty in the State of New York, and possibly in the United States. It is a major part of our heritage.

Lion Gardiner came across the Atlantic from England around 1639 to help the New England settlers deal with the Indians. He was a trained engineer, married, with a wife and children, and he was an expert in the designing landed on a small island just off what is now Amagansett, which navigators referred to as the Isle of Wight. It was also uninhabited, wooded and was three by seven miles in size. Gardiner claimed it. He and his servants built a manor house and a farmhouse. And the Gardiner family moved in. Lion Gardiner was the first English settler to set foot in New York State.

From that day until six months ago, that island, renamed Gardiner's Island, was owned, successively, by fifteen generations of Gardiners, who passed down not only their property but also the paintings, documents and furniture from their manor house, and from several other houses including the main mansion in East Hampton on Main Street.

When I first moved here, I met Robert David Lion Gardiner, then about fifty years old, who billed himself as "the sixteenth Lord of the Manor." He was a man born to the aristocracy and building of fortifications. He was needed in Old Saybrook, Connecticut to build a fort to protect the settlers from the Pequots, a fierce Native American tribe.

After the fort was built, he and his family embarked for Long Island, which at the time was inhabited only by Native Americans. They

of this country, rich, a non-stop talker, and if you listened to him long enough, he would tell the same group of stories over and over again, about his island and the importance of his family to this country.

Some may have found him to be a big bore, but I did not. I thought he was fascinating, and for the most part, I found almost all his stories to be absolutely true. The Gardiner connections with East Hampton, with America and the world, were truly astonishing, and were a part of what has made the Hamptons so historic and unique. The family legacy needed to be preserved. That was my opinion. And I truly expected that Gardiner would have heirs and the dynasty would continue. He had married Eunice, a red-haired former English model. But so far, the union had proved barren. On the other hand, the game was not yet over. Gardiner could be hilarious, charming and dashing. And he was full of energy. He had everything going for him.

I have often retold many of his stories, and I think there is one particular one that is appropriate to what is going on today. You need to know that the Dominy family lived in East Hampton in the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries and were fine clockmakers. Their exquisite clocks are very valuable today.

"One day in the summer, my chauffeur and I were unloading a big grandfather clock from the back of our station wagon to the sidewalk in front of Corwin Jewelers on Main Street in Southampton. We were struggling with it, when out of the corner of my eye I saw Mrs. DuPont coming down the street. She stopped. And held her pince-nez up to her eye. And she said (done in falsetto) 'Oh Mr. Gardiner, what a beautiful clock. It's a Dominy clock, isn't it?'

'Yes,' I said. 'we are taking it in to be repaired.' (Back to falsetto). 'Wherever did you get it?' 'We didn't GET it, Madame, we had it MADE.'

I later learned it was made around 1799 for David Gardiner, the eighth Lord of the Manor. And there it was, intact, still inside the family mansion, in 1997, which is when the 16th Lord told me this story.

This clock, and these furnishings in this house, should never have been sold at auction, in my opinion. Yet, strangely, that is what Gardiner ordered in his will. He did, in the end, fail to keep his dynasty going. And he would scatter it to the wind.

I think, early on, in the 1960s, when I met him, he really thought he would live forever. Or that a child of his would be born. Or something. In the 1970s, a popular local Congressman, Otis Pike, made the suggestion that since Gardiner had no heirs, maybe it was time for the government to take over the Island. This Island, the oldest privately owned island in America to remain in the same family, could be condemned. Mr. Gardiner then paid a princely sum, and the island kept up as a national park, a treasure.

Robert D. L. Gardiner was so infuriated that this Congressman could even think that his stewardship was inadequate that he flung down the gauntlet, declared himself a candidate and ran against Pike in the next election. Gardiner lost. But that sure shut up Pike.

In the late 1980s, it was learned that a long lost branch of the Gardiner family, now with the name Goelet, had a claim on Gardiner's Island equal to that of Robert D. L. Gardiner. Again Gardiner was enraged, but when they moved in and staked a claim for co-ownership of the place, there was nothing he could do. I recall an amazing "welcoming party" held in downtown East Hampton in the late 1980s at which the Goelets, a very wealthy New York City family, announced their claim, and at the same time invited everyone to come to a 'fair' on the town green where people could meet them. They would be giving substantial sums to each of the local charities — and they did — and it was as if they thought this strange way of coming into the community would sort of buy their way into the hearts of the local peasants. It didn't.

Gardiner and the Goelets went at it for the next fifteen years, one on the island one month, the other on the island another month,

The Pill

Secrets From An Expert On Getting A Pill Into A Dog

By Dan Rattiner

The number of pills was 24. The instructions were to give the dog one in the morning and one at night until the pills were gone. Dog wasn't feeling well.

For the first few days, everything worked fine. I'd get two pieces of sliced cheese, put the little white pill between the cheese slices to make a pill sandwich, hold it out and tell the dog to sit. He sits.

I would then wave it back and forth just above his nose. His eyes would follow it this way and that, he would lick his chops, and then I'd lower toward his mouth and he would take it in one bite. He apparently didn't even know he had eaten it with a pill inside.

Around the fifth day, however, he discovered the cheese had a nut in it. It made a crunching noise as he bit down, and he raised an eyebrow. But swallowing was already underway and before he could make any decisions, it was down.

The next day, the trouble began.

Spalding is a very rough and ready dog, willing, on command, to leap over bushes without knowing what is on the other side, willing to run across the linoleum and then skitter into a kitchen door with a crash as he tries and fails to change direction. Nothing squeamish about him.

On the sixth day, however, after I sat him down and gloriously waved the cheese sandwich this way and that, praising its restorative properties, he followed it with his eyes but there was a new thought process in there.

Well, there were 14 pills left of the 24. Somehow I'd just have to find a way to get them into him.

Suspicion. They're trying to put something over on me.

So I lowered it, he sniffed it, decided it was fine, gulped at it and crunched on the pill, and his eyes widened. What's this? I suspected THIS.

But it was already too late.

The seventh day was big, big trouble. He sniffed the cheese when I lowered it, and then turned away. No thanks. Not with that thing in the middle. I persisted. He turned still farther away.

So I dropped the cheese on the linoleum in front of him and he stared at it for a while. Then he pushed it with his paw. Then he pushed it with his nose. And then he lay down in front of it and started licking it. And guess what. It came apart, and there, inside, was the white pill.

AHA! he said.

He did go so far as to lick the white pill, but he spit it back out. Not edible. Then he ate the cheese.

After this, two days went by, during which I tried alternate methods of getting the pill inside the dog. I tried holding his head still and prying his jaws open. He growled menacingly. I stopped. Then I went back to the old way, but with cheddar cheese, which had a much stronger smell. I tried cream cheese. I tried a piece of baloney. I tried a piece of chicken. With everything, he licked and jostled it with a paw until the pill appeared and then he wouldn't eat it. Also, for the rest of the day he looked at me as if I had just eaten his first-born. The level of trust we formerly enjoyed, remember that? Gone.

I called the vet and explained the problem again.

"Hmmm. Try putting it in cat food," he said. "Or liverwurst."

I tried them. The results were the same.

"I've only gotten ten pills out of the 24 into him," I said to the vet the next day.

"Is he better?"

"Yes."

"Then you've probably given him enough."

But then I thought — what happens in the future if he gets sick? So I called the vet back again. Was I really just doomed, if that happened, to bring him into the vet every morning where four nurses in full body armor would, at great cost, force a pill into him? He'd never forgive me.

"Do they make a medicine for a dog that you drop on his back between his shoulder blades that does the same thing that this pill does?"

"No," he said.

Well, there were 14 pills left of the 24. Somehow I'd just have to find a way to get them into him. I tried skipping a day. Perhaps he would forget if I waited a day. He remembered.

In all these cases, by the way, I wound up having to pick a pill covered with dog slobber off the floor. Sometimes it would have crumbled to dust and have to be swept up. Sometimes it would look pretty good and I could try it the next day. But there was no fooling him.

Out of desperation, I devised a plan that finally succeeded. Here it is.

I went down to Citarella's Market and bought a portion of beef stew.

"Enjoy," the man behind the counter said.

When I got home, I took a fork and went into the stew, pushing aside potatoes and peas, until I got to a piece of beef. I took it out and offered it to the dog.

Sit. Follow it with your eyes. Lower. There. He sniffed it. Turned away. So I dropped it in front of him. He licked it, batted it with his paw, there was no pill in there. And so he ate it.

Then I did the same thing a second time. And a third time. With each successive piece, he did a shorter and shorter inspection until finally, after the fifth piece, it was sniff, eat. I had him. But I did not give him the pill that evening. Not at all.

The next day, I did the same thing and on the third day, he was eager for the beef. He could not believe his good fortune. He had gone from cold kibble and bits to roast beef from Citarella. Wow.

Finally, I introduced the pill. First, three pieces without the pill. He gobbled them up. The next piece I prepared differently. I pried the meat open and, using a tweezer, inserted the pill inside without touching it with my fingers. Then I held the sandwich out to him.

He gobbled it right down. Then there was this expression of sheer surprise. What the hell!

And at that point, I gave him a final piece with no pill in it. Must have been a mistake, he thought, inspecting it briefly, and then gobbling that up.

And so I had him. So to answer the question you asked just before the beginning of this article, the reason he now eats beef rather than the kibble and bits he used to eat is that I'm planning for the next time he gets sick. I mean, if you are not trustworthy enough for your dog to trust you, what the hell, right? Besides, after all the pills were gone, I did again try kibble and bits. And he turned away.

Need meat, he said. And no nuts, please.

Dredging at Georgica Pond

Solutions

Thanks, Larry Penny, Fred Thiele And Especially The Late Jim McCaffrey

By Debbie Tuma

After years spent trying to obtain necessary permits to move sand that is clogging Georgica Pond, the East Hampton Town Trustees have finally succeeded, and up to 6,000 cubic yards of sand are being hauled away.

Aram Terchunian, owner of First Coastal Corporation of Westhampton Beach, is doing the work, and says this process is "a win-win situation for everyone," considering this sand is being used to replenish the receding bluffs of about five homeowners along Potato Road in nearby Sagaponack. Severe erosion has caused their sand to be depleted over the years, and the fresh sand from Georgica Pond will be the answer to their prayers. He said similar projects have already happened at Mecox Pond and Sagaponack Pond.

The sand-moving process, which took about a week, began last Tuesday, using several big trucks. Permits were needed from both the Army Corps of Engineers and the State Dept. of Environmental Conservation.

"We're taking compatible sand and moving it for beach erosion nourishment, which is a good thing," said Terchunian, a long-time erosion control expert in Westhampton Beach. He said this recent excavation also coincided with the opening of Georgica Pond on January 21st. The East Hampton Town Trustees ordered the opening after several homeowners reported some of the highest water levels in recent history.

"Jim McCaffrey, the clerk of the Trustees, ordered this sand before he died, sadly, just as the pond was let out," said Terchunian. McCaffrey, who had lived next to and watched over Georgica Pond throughout his life, died cause the sand to build up, or shoal. This prevents the pond from draining properly, and eventually, the shoal has to be removed.

Terchunian said his company only had a "compressed timeframe" of about a week to move the sand, since there are several "environmental windows" to consider, such as piping plover season and the seeding times of winter and summer flounder.

He said there are four steps to moving the sand, which include first excavating the sand out of the ground, placing it onto a truck or payloader, trucking the sand down the beach to where it needs to go, and grading it onto the proper slope by bulldozers. He said a team of about a dozen people is moving the sand, which was expected to be finished up on Tuesday, February 1.

recently following a long illness. Each year, he had made the decisions, along with the Trustees, when and how often to close and open the pond.

"This pond was his project — for years, he was responsible for managing it, working hand in hand with Larry Penny, of the East Hampton Natural Resources Department," said Terchunian, who added that Georgica Pond needs to get "let out" about 3-4 times a year. Since most of the year the pond and the ocean are separated by a narrow barrier of sand, waves washing over this area tend to Tom Knobel, a member of the East Hampton Town Trustees, said, "The Trustees have been very desirous of getting the sand out of Georgica Pond, and we helped obtain the permits. We're selling the sand to the homeowners, so we do stand to benefit. Also, we are required to replace the sand within the same system, along the littoral drift."

Knobel said this clearing out of sand will help the pond, so "we can reclaim it." He said, "Sand has been washing in here and we've been trying to get the right permits forever. Thanks to Larry Penny and Assemblyman Fred Thiele, we got this facilitated in time."

The Teacher Who Nudges Local Students To Ground Breaking Discoveries

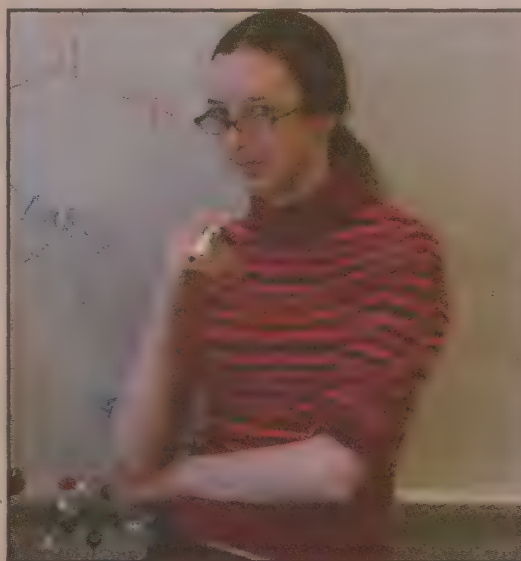

By Shawn Thorgersen

Recently, all of Long Island and the scientific communities learned of Ailish Bateman, the Pierson High School senior who discovered Scoriosin, an antibiotic compound now being tested for its effectiveness against HIV, SARS, and West Nile Virus. But what many people don't know is that a bespectacled, spiky-haired high school teacher from East Hampton has been providing Bateman and other students the opportunity to make such startling advances in science. His name is Dr. Robert Schumacher, and during eight years as a science teacher he has led two students to the semi-finals of the prestigious Intel Science Talent Search, and a third student just this week to the finals. They have also moved on to bright careers in research and even to guest appearances on the "Rosie O'Donnell Show."

It was Schumacher who originally found the mold from which his student, Ailish Bateman, developed the now-famous compound. "I'm always looking," he says, referring to the walks he takes through his neighborhood and along nature trails. "Everywhere I go, I have a plastic bag in my back pocket." Schumacher found the mold near his East Hampton home. He had noticed that the specimen had fallen off a tree but hadn't decomposed after several days. Suspecting the mold might have antibacterial properties, he gathered a sampling and brought it in for Bateman to study. The rest, as they say, is history.

Schumacher takes little credit, though.

Ailish Bateman, Intel Science Talent Search finalist

"Once I knew it was active, [Ailish] was definitely the right student for the job. She's the best student I've ever worked with in research." But the doctor, who received his BS in Marine Biology from Southampton College before attending the University of Hawaii for an MS in Organic Chemistry and again for his Ph.D. in Organic Chemistry, has a history of helping gifted students make amazing discoveries. East Hampton alumnus Stephanie Talmage, for instance, became an Intel Science Talent Search semi-finalist while working with Schumacher during her senior year in 2000. With his guidance, Talmage isolated an antibiotic that proved effective against E.coli and other bacteria. During Talmage's junior year, she and Dr. Schumacher made national news along with two other East Hampton students, Sara Miller and Katie Sarris, when they identified and named a new molecule, Bonactin. It was for that research that the girls appeared as guests on the "Rosie O'Donnell Show" in 1999. Schumacher, however, remained hidden on the sidelines during the program. "I went with them," he recalls. "They stood with Rosie, I stood in the audience... it was about them."

Still, Talmage, who attended Cornell University and is now working on her Masters in Marine Biology at California State University, Northridge, attributes much of her achievement to Dr. Schumacher's guidance. "He clearly was the spark that started my research career. I always knew that science was my love, but Dr. Schumacher was an inspiration in both his way of teaching and compassion for all of his students... he [is] what I would like to be as a person and as a researcher."

Dr. Schumacher's most recent protégé, Ailish Bateman, shares similar thoughts about her teacher. "It's great — not only is Dr. Schumacher an excellent teacher, he has a wealth of experience in the world of research... He expects more from his students than most other teachers I have had, and students respond to that. I know I did."

Bateman, a candidate for valedictorian of Pierson's senior class, is currently waiting to hear whether her work on Scoriosin will afford her a place in the Finals of the Intel Science Talent Search.

Dr. Schumacher's own love of science and research has been with him since childhood. "I always knew I wanted to be some kind of scientist after watching Jacques Cousteau. I loved fish and everything about the ocean."

Originally from New Hyde Park, he spent some time conducting research at Harvard Medical in Boston before attending grad school. Schumacher then returned to Long Island and taught at East Hampton High School for five years before finding a new home at Pierson in Sag Harbor. There, he is surrounded by gadgets that resemble, to the layman, set pieces ripped from Frankenstein's lab and students writing computations on dry-erase boards while feverishly glancing at the Periodic Table.

As fascinated as Dr. Schumacher is by research, it is a wonder that he chose to teach in the high school environment — especially when one considers how much more time he could devote to experiments by teaching eager science majors at universities. Nonetheless, Schumacher's choice was simple. "I was finishing my Ph.D. and getting ready to do a post-doc when I got a call from East Hampton, asking if I wanted to do some teaching. I started watching all the kids running by, and my wife saw the smile on my face. I figured I'd do it. I'd teach high school." Sitting in his classroom, amid the whirring noises of a machine that incessantly shakes bottles of strange liquids, he grins. "This is where it's at, baby."

Considering his past successes, Dr. Schumacher could rest easy. He's tenured and is credited with having developed a research program that has propelled several students towards promising careers in science. But the doctor's eyes are already on the next project. "There's a plant I want to study. It only lives on Long Island, and it's an endangered species." He then points out a bottle filled with a mysterious yellow substance, and casually explains that it may very well contain the next new antibiotic discovery — but that, of course, is for one of his students to discover.

Power.

Freedom of speech and the arts were at the other extreme.

And now, just since 9/11 and the war in Iraq, it seems, personal morals have begun screeching back to the conservative end again. On NBC the other morning, I watched on the "Today Show" where a well known clothing designer was being pilloried for offering up for sale, among his 300 dress designs, a low cut thing that teenage girls could wear to the Junior Prom.

"You told me before the show that you wouldn't let your own daughter wear that," Katie Couric said.

"I wouldn't," the designer said. "But somebody else's parent might. We make a whole range of dresses."

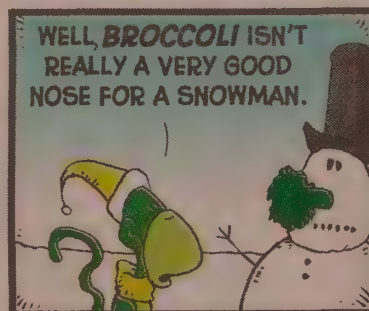

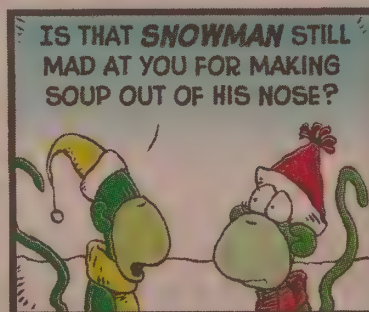

"So you won't pull this dress off the market."

"This dress just got me on NBC," he said.

And the word butt — you can still say butt, can't you? Yes? I'm talkin' to you. Well that seems to have got us on the AP wire.

Who's Here

By Jerry Cimisi

Immersed in his new job as manager of the East Hampton Airport, James Brundige talked about his career, both in aviation and management.

"I've always been interested in aviation," he said. He grew up in upstate Saratoga Springs. After graduating from Babson College in Massachusetts with Bachelor of Science and Bachelor of Economics Degrees, he enlisted in the Air Force.

"First I was in Laredo, Texas, then I went to Oklahoma, where I trained to become an instructor." In the early 70s, Brundige trained new officers as they learned to fly jets. During his twelve years with the military, he became a captain and was also trained as a fighter pilot. "Actually, in the military it's called a 'fighter-interceptor' pilot," he said.

"I was in Ellington, Texas, as the same time George Bush was there. I never met him, though he and I had the same instructor."

Brundige had five years active duty in the military, then served seven years with the Air National Guard in Westhampton. "This was before the 106 was there as a search and rescue operation. The Air Guard stationed in Westhampton were trained as fighter-interceptors."

He added, "Do you see that plane at the gate of the Westhampton Airport? That's an F-102. I was the last person to fly that plane. I landed it on fire. I was planning to land, and the fire light came on, indicating a fire in the engine. The procedure was that whenever that light came on I was supposed to eject — but I was right at the airport, so I chose to try to land. I did, but when they put the fire out all that was left was a shell."

Before leaving the Guard, Brundige also trained as an air sea rescue pilot.

"Simultaneous to flying with the Guard," he said, "my wife Barbara and I also ran a private school in Nassau, the North Shore Day School. I was the manager and my wife was the headmistress. We took over the school in 1972. The school and camp had 15 acres of property, several buildings, and a fleet of buses. There were about 30 people working for us during the school year and 150 during the summer. As a flight instructor in the military, where I also managed the squadron safety program, I was getting a good background in management. Certainly that, and managing the school, gave me the background in aviation and management that brought me here [the East Hampton Airport]."

Brundige oversaw all facets of the business of running the school: accounting, taxes, maintenance and personnel. In the sixteen years he and his wife ran it, the North Shore Day School increased its business tenfold.

Brundige and his wife sold the school in 1988, though long before that, Brundige was continuing to do two things at once. "At the end of the '70s, I got into corporate jet flying." He flew Gulfstream and Falcon jets around the world manager, and the chief pilot out of JFK for United." For a time he was also an Employee Assistance Program counselor for the airline's personnel. In addition, he was a FAA Line Check Airman on the Boeing 727 and 777.

When asked what he liked best about flying, James Brundige said, "I'm drawn to both the technology and the excitement of being at the controls. And I find the people who work in the aviation industry very interesting. It's a difficult business and you have to be dedicated to work in it."

Recently, Brundige was getting ready to retire from United. Or, to be more accurate, he was being forced to retire at the FAA-mandated age of 60. That's when the manager's position at the East Hampton Airport opened. Pat Ryan, who had worked at the airport for 31 years, as manager for 20, was leaving. Brundige was interviewed by the Town Board; the airport is owned by East Hampton Town. His experience in aviation and management obviously landed him the job, and he began his training on the job January 1.

He said that running a small airport is like running a small business. "You manage property; you have tenants. In this case, 2 FBOs, or fixed base operators. They lease space from the town. The FBOs, in turn, lease space as part of their operations: ramp space, storage planes, etc."

As manager, Brundige said, he is also in charge of "the airport's budget, personnel, maintaining the integrity of the runways, lighting, revenue from the tenants and landing fees. His duties also include: supervising the proper storage of planes; directing the flow of air and ground traffic; promoting the use of the airport's facilities; overseeing any type of public relations concerning the airport, such as putting out press releases; must be up to the minute on all data concerning weather; and make sure that the airport operates in a manner consistent with federal, state and local laws.

The East Hampton airport, once simply a rural airport when it was built, may still not be large, but it is now used by a fair number of what Tom Wolfe likes to call "Masters of the Universe." The airport saw its beginning as a Works Progress Administration (WPA) project in 1936. Under Supervisor Perry Duryea, the town applied to the government to help build the first airport on the East End of Long Island. Construction got underway in November of that year, with a crew of fifty men. Ultimately about 150 men worked on the air-for the American Can Company out of White Plains. He was responsible for all aspects of the flights, down to the catering.

He was hired by United Airlines in 1979, but because the airline was suffering financial difficulties during a recession, he was laid off before he ever began working. "I was called back in 1984," Brundige said. He worked for United for 20 years, retiring as captain. "I was a flight port that was completed in 1938 for a cost of $92,540.40 — to which East Town contributed $22,820.

At the beginning of WWII, the federal government gave the town another $372,000 to expand the airport and the army would eventually use it for training exercises.

Subsequent decades saw additional hangar space and runway improvement. For a good deal of this time the entire airport was leased from the Town. It was not until 1968 that East Hampton Town assumed full control of the airport, and installed its first airport manager, Charlie Smith. A new terminal building was finished in 1997.

The airport is 600 acres, though most of that is wooded buffer around the buildings and runways. There are three runways; the longest at 4,242 feet, the shortest at 2200 feet.

Brundige said there are six hangers 100 feet by 100 feet, and four at 50 feet by 50 feet.

He added that the town must approve of all parties and aircraft that use the airport. "It all goes through the legal department. Right now they're having me do a report on all aircraft based here."

He said there is no set routine to his position. "The season certainly affects what goes on here. For instance, in summer we're more concerned with jet fuel purchases and maintenance while in the winter we might be looking over our leases."

When longtime airport manager Pat Ryan leaves on March 4, all this will be Brundige's responsibility. He currently lives a long drive to the west in Nassau County. On the Monday following the weekend Blizzard of '05, he watched plows clear the runways and talked about the drifts across Sunrise Highway as he came out that morning.

"I've rented a house in East Hampton. I suspect that in a year I will buy out here."

with accusations of vandalism, and even at one point, a reported outdoor dinner party on the island given by Goelets at which Robert D. L. Gardiner, uninvited, appeared in a rage and chased people around. Eventually the matter went to court, where a judge took it upon himself to keep the two parties at arm's length.

At this point, Gardiner announced he would adopt a son. He had found a lawyer in Mississippi, named Green (middle name Gardiner) who was in his forties and was a distant relation to him. The man considered letting Gardiner adopt him. Gardiner wined and dined him, but in the end, this man opted to remain in Mississippi with his law practice and his wife and children rather than hook up with this eighty-year-old maniac, no matter how much he was offering.

By the turn of the twenty-first century, Gardiner was a frail figure in East Hampton. His clothes — he always wore a blue blazer — were unkempt. At one point, I saw this ninety-year-old man standing on North Main Street by the old windmill, his hair wild, his shirttail out, carrying a white plastic shopping bag, and holding out his thumb trying to hitch a ride up toward his marina in Three Mile Harbor. The sun was shining and he was smiling happily. But I couldn't bring myself to stop.

In Gardiner's final year — he died last August at 92 — he secluded himself in his East Hampton home, where he was often seen sitting in a chair wrapped in a blanket, watching TV. His wife Eunice was at their Palm Beach house, the Goelets were on the island. The painting he had commissioned be done of his beautiful wife when she was in her prime — it was done by Salvador Dali — was still on the wall, there were the suits of armor that had been passed down, the historic chests were in the living room.

He'd be damned if he'd turn any of these historic pieces over to the Goelets. Sell it all.

The Sheltered Islander By Sally Flynn

Sheltered Islander #334

Close Only Counts In Horseshoes and Handgrenades....or does it?

"Body found alive in morgue: Associated Press 1/26/05 RALEIGH, N.C. — ...Emergency medical technicians had declared 29-year-old Larry D. Green dead almost two hours earlier, after he was hit by a car. Medical examiner J.B. Perdue was called to the accident scene Monday but did not examine Green then. Later, he was documenting Green's injuries when he noticed the man was breathing...Green, 29, was taken to Duke University Medical Center in Durham, where he was in critical condition Wednesday."

I don't know where the stars were on this night, but obviously there was a disturbance in the time-space continuum and an extreme convergence of bad luck got through and stuck to Larry Green. Bad enough Green was in a car accident, bad enough the EMT's didn't think he was alive when they got there, bad enough they called him in as deceased. Then when the Medical Examiner arrives to declare him officially dead, he doesn't have his "How to tell if a person is really dead" quick reference card with him. You gotta know you are caught in a vortex of bad luck! On top of all that, there's no way Green could use this as an excuse to call in sick for work.

"Hey Joe, this is Larry. Listen, I can't make it in today, man."

"Larry, you don't have any more sick days. You gotta come in."

"No, seriously, I was in an accident last night and ended up in the morgue."

"How could you end up in the morgue? Don't you mean the hospital?"

"No man, the morgue, they thought I was dead."

"Yeah? Well, I'm thinking the same thing if you don't get in here."

"No, Joe, check it out, I was in a body bag, zipped up and everything."

"Hey, you know how many times I seen you in the bag?"

"No, Joe, I mean it. I was in a real body bag, in the morgue, man, I'm tellin' you! I was unconscious the whole time."

"Larry, just cut the crap and get in here. And don't worry if you're conscious or not. I can't tell with you, anyway."

"Changes May Be In Store For Franklin EMS After 'Dead' Man Found Alive: AP 1/28/05 FRANKLIN COUNTY, N.C. — As county officials continue to investigate how a man was mistakenly pronounced dead, the situation could mean changes for Franklin County Emergency Services. ...The report also looks at decisions made at the county's makeshift morgue. Currently, Franklin County EMS does not require a second opinion before declaring death. The deputy director said that could now change. ... Five people have been suspended in connection with the incident."

Gee, what a surprise... I think I'm gonna have a heart attack and die from that surprise....Is that like 'The Donald demands signed pre-nup before wedding'...or 'Michael Jackson is in really big trouble now'?

In defense of the Coroner, J.B. Perdue, it was probably a very cold night and the guy was probably close enough to dead anyway. And even if he was just slightly alive, he'd stay fresh in the morgue till morning, so maybe this is not as big an issue as it seems.

Plus, I bet this kind of thing has happened before in other parts of the country. We refer to lots of people as half dead, nearly dead, at death's door, with one foot in the grave and the other on a banana peel, etc. ... I figure Larry Green was probably between death's door and a banana peel.

And now, the county is going to require a second opinion for pronouncing death. Sounds good on the surface, but think of the time and money that will be spent getting a second opinion on whether or not a person found at an accident in pieces is half dead, nearly dead, or just a dead head. But I suppose it might be a good idea to have two opinions on it, if it prevents another near tragedy.

I recommend, since it's North Carolina, where sheep count as dates, that they make the most thorough examination they can, as they do in Oz. "To see if he is morally, ethically, spiritually, physically, positively, absolutely, undeniably and reliably dead." Then the coroner can issue a certificate that says: "As Coroner, I must confer, I've thoroughly examined him. And he's not only merely dead, he's really, most sincerely dead."

Yup, it's still true, close ONLY counts in horseshoes and hand grenades.

LOVE BITES

Dan's Papers hosted the second annual Love Bites Benefit for Cancer Care at JL Restaurant in East Hampton this past Saturday. Over a hundred participants from the East End of Long Island donated their services for Cancer Care of the Hamptons, a national non-profit organization that provides free professional support services to anyone affected by cancer, as well as people with cancer, their caregivers, children, loved ones, and the bereaved. For more information about Cancer Care call 1-800-813-HOPE or at cancercare.org. Once again Linda Shapiro packed the house with supporters and the live auction was a smashing success. Her efforts have made this event one of the most popular and fun events of the Hamptons' winter season.

Eric Weinberger of Water Mill put together an evening of remarkable performances for the tenth anniversary Ataxia-Telangiectasia Gala, presenting an exciting and heartfelt evening. Children with this rare genetic disease are usually not able to walk by the age of ten and they often do not survive their teens. A-T research is progressing rapidly towards a cure, while making a positive impact on other more prevalent diseases such as AIDS, Parkinson's, Alzheimer's and cancer. Congratulations to Eric Weinberger and friends for their loving dedication to families fighting A-T.

Combine the verjus, shallot, garlic and mustard in a bowl. Add the canola and olive oils in a slow, steady stream, whisking until smooth. Stir in fresh herbs, season with salt and pepper to taste, and toss with greens.

On Long Island, we're lucky to have two wineries that produce verjus every year, Jamesport Vineyards and Wolffer Estate.

Jamesport Vineyards' verjus ($10) is made from half-ripe Chardonnay grapes. Pale yellow with a definite greenish tint, it's filled with lime flavors and hints of honeydew melon. Subtle acidity and a gentle sweetness make it perfect for sipping or as a mixer.

Delivering much brighter acidity and lively tartness, the Wolffer Estate bottling ($10) offers lemongrass and light herbal notes that frame refined green apple flavors. Made from Chardonnay, Merlot and Cabernet Franc, this is my hands-down choice if I'm using verjus in my cooking.

Try verjus, especially if you're visiting the vineyards with kids and want them to feel a part of the day!

To order verjus or for more recipes, contact Wolffer Estate at 537-5106 or Jamesport Vineyards at 722-5256.

Dan's North Fork

Dining Destinations: Dan's Papers Critics, Choices

Bayview Inn & Restaurant. Culinary fireworks from a new sparkler facing Peconic Bay. The historic Bayview has undergone many identity changes since its inception as an 1860's boutique hotel. Owners Bob and Pat Patchell have restored its original spirit, with seven guestrooms and the North Fork's most exciting new dining room. Thomas Lopez creates separate specials menus, complementing his regular card of winners like spinach pasta with chunky lobster, Asian-style breast of duck, and marinated lamb chops in mint demi-glace. Scrumptious desserts and a kid's menu ensure everyone goes home (or upstairs) happy. South Jamesport Ave. and Front Street, South Jamesport. 722-2659. Entrees, $18-$26. (Trueman-Honey, 8/1/03).

The Clubhouse at Indian Island. Along the pretty Peconic River at Indian Island Golf Course, this restaurant offers quality cooking at realistic prices convenient to diners from both forks. New proprietor Russ Moran transformed a drab dining room to one of warmth and comfort with soft lighting and smartly laid tables. His eclectic menu features the gently pan-fried oysters and clams on the half shell, which you'd swear were just plucked from the bay. French onion soup is deep in flavor. L.I. duck in a pepper cherry sauce and calves liver with bacon & onions were tasty and will leave no one hungry. Riverside Drive & Route 105, Riverhead. 727-0788. Entrees, $11.95-$16.95. (Bradbrook, 4/16/04).

Cooperage Inn. With a beautiful new look emphasizing the cooperage theme, this charmer continues to carry the banner of North Fork cuisine. Chef/owner Jonathan Perkins, along with chefs Laimo and Hegeman, produce inspired appetizers such as rare sesame tuna carpaccio and pan-seared fresh mozzarella, and don't miss the sesame crusted calamari served over field greens with a soy vinaigrette. Steaks are steakhouse worthy, and the rigatoni ala vodka continues to dazzle. Fish here is always pristine and cooked with a light hand. Entrees $15.50-$30. 2218 Sound Ave. Baiting Hollow. 727-8994. (Simm, 1/10/03).

Desmond's Pub & Restaurant at the Inn at East Wind. The North Fork's new destination hotel hosts an elegant and restful dining room serving excellent a la carte dishes and classic pub fare. Executive chef Richard Laurelli's daily specials are consistent standouts, as evidenced by his chilled vegetable soup with lobster meat, as well as the Andalusia-style beef and chicken tapas. Pub favorites like crisply battered cod and chips hit the mark and familiar entrees like grilled lamb chops are perfectly prepared. The wine list is sensibly priced, though short on local vintages. Blueberry creme brulee was an inventive and winning update on a classic dessert. Entrees, $16-$26. 5720 Rt. 25A, Wading River. 929-3500. (Bradbrook, 8/29/03).

Ile de Beaute. Closed for the season.

Modern Snack Bar. Closed for the season until March.

Red Door. A quintessentially North Fork restaurant: Manhattan-caliber cuisine paired with an ambience of low-key charm. The Mediterranean-influenced American regional menu always offers a panoply of pastas as well as meat and fish dishes. Perhaps their winningest recipe occurred by accident. Ask genial chef/owner Stephen Mazzella for the story behind his remarkable porterhouse pork chop with honey, capers and cayenne. A true instance of luck being the residue of design! Dessert lovers have their vocabulary stretched by such wonders as raspberry crème brulee and Godiva chocolate cake with Tahitian vanilla bean ice cream. Ample wine list. Entrees - $16-$28. 13560 Main Rd., Mattituck. 298-4800. (Trueman-Honey, 12/03).

Scrimshaw. Chef/co-owner Rosa Ross, whose culinary credentials are carved in many a menu from Hong Kong to Italy to Manhattan, brings her latest invention to Greenport. Nestled at the end of Preston's Dock, there are dazzling views of Shelter Island. The slightly crammed dining room is made intimate and warm by sophisticated lighting and subdued music. The menu is full of interesting tastes, starting with excellent duck confit-stuffed spring rolls and hearty fish chowder. Especially good among the eclectic entrees are tamarind lamb shanks with lemon risotto and the supremely comforting seafood in a sweet, tangy kaffir lime coconut broth. Interesting wine list. Preston's Dock (at end of Main Street), Greenport. 477-8882. (Simm, 06/04).

Stonewall's. Haute cuisine in a tranquil setting, at the Woods Course at Cherry Creek in Riverhead. Step into the warm and inviting dining room, however, and your thoughts will happily shift from golf course to main course. Many superb entrees, including the delicate halibut in a mustard-nut crust, are worth savoring long after the meal has concluded. Duck a l'orange on a bed of wild rice is another standout as is the deeply flavorful lobster bisque. Rigatoni with roasted tomatoes, mozzarella, capers and olives is exquisitely al dente. Fine wines and creatively fruity desserts complete a dining experience par excellence. Entrees $15-$27. 967 Reeves Ave., Riverhead. 506-0777. (Bradbrook, 9/12/03).

Touch of Venice. Top-notch Italian cuisine in a delightful setting on Mattituck Inlet. Named appropriately for location, cuisine and a large mural dominating the dining room, this is family dining par excellence with a sophisticated ambience. Among the kitchen's highlights: Orient Point oysters, chilled but not icy; baby spinach salad with gorgonzola; black angus porterhouse. Manicotti in a fresh, simple tomato sauce is among the many pleasing pasta dishes. Lobster Meat over angel hair pasta, a frequent special, is an exciting dish of imaginative complexity and one of the North Fork's perennial favorites. Cold seafood bruschetta is another special to watch for. Entrees $16-$34. Wickham Avenue at Matt-A-Mar Marina, Mattituck. 298-5851. (Bradbrook, 8/16/02).

Tuscan House. Your table is yours for the evening at this elegant, upscale Italian. Authentic, classical dishes bear the deft touch of chef William Oster. His fish is exceptionally fresh and his osso bucco masterly. But his virtuosity lies in the care with which he pairs his 16 pastas and his sublime sauces. The results range from delicate to intense. Pappardelle with a puree of beans dressed with soppressata, fresh chilies, garlic and parmigiano reggiano is typically adventurous and winning. The dessert tray is filled with excellent choices. Well-chosen wines, emphasis on regional Italians. 673 Osborn Ave., Riverhead. 727-2330. (Bradbrook, 9/7/01).

Tweed's. Owner Ed Tuccio parlayed his interests in history, Americana and the bison to create this unique eatery. The décor puts one in mind of an expensive turn-of-the-century men's club, but with a romantic twist. Notable appetizers include Oysters Portland, enveloped in sautéed leeks and crisp bacon, and the Bistro Salad, redolent of blue cheese and roasted beets. Aside from Tweed's excellent specialty of the house, succulent farm-raised bison, also recommended are the Sashimi Sesame Tuna, carb-free vegetable lasagna, and Duck Two Ways. Don't skip dessert: the pastry chef is a graduate of the Cordon Bleu in London.

Entrees $19-26. 17 E. Main St., Riverhead. 208-3151. (Trueman-Honey, 7/04/03).

Away At School... By David Lion Rattiner

Sex and the City

The world has changed since the end of HBO's hit series "Sex and the City." There used to be something called "The Sex and The City Super Fan Ritual." This was a ritual that ran from June of 1998 to February of 2004, almost every Sunday night of the year, and the ritual was mostly practiced by women. Basically, "The Sex and The City Super Fan Ritual" was a group gathering near a television set to watch HBO and entered the viewers into the world of Carrie, Samantha, Charlotte and Miranda.

However, now that we are in 2005 and re-runs of the show are available to watch on-demand and the free cable channel TBS, men everywhere are discovering the awesomeness of the show and are having to hold secret meetings at their homes with other men, where they perform the ritual that so many women have performed in recent years.

The "The He-man Secret Society of Sex and The City Watchers" move among us, in secret, watching the drama unfold as Carrie decides what she is going to do about the current mess her relationship is in. These men work in construction, they are bankers, building contractors, landscapers, football watchers, beef jerky eaters, beer drinkers, husbands, fathers, brothers and sons. In essence, they walk among us everywhere and nowhere. Believe me, this reporter knows, because this reporter is a member.

I am here to expose the secret society. Not out of shame or guilt, but because, well, there really is only one reason. WE MEN are just dying to talk with you about how exciting it is that Aidan and Carrie are going to break up!!! We just cannot hold it in any longer! We absolutely love this show and we can no longer feel ashamed that we do.

I am just dying to know what is going to happen to the two of them. I personally do not get Carrie at all. What is the deal with her wearing her engagement ring around her neck? I don't get why she is constantly complaining about Aidan, either.

It does not make any sense. I personally feel like she is an idiot and the guy has been nothing but good to her. But that is just me.

Watching the relationship between Carrie and Aidan on television has got me worrying about what women look for in men. This worry is resonating with other members of the Secret Society as well. I really don't understand why a guy who is obviously nice, smart, loyal and good looking has such a hard time winning Carrie over. The future between the two of them is bright and Carrie simply refuses to accept the fact that she is dating a good guy and is constantly scaring the living daylight out of regular men everywhere that nothing is going to be good enough, even if we are identical to Aidan. This disaster between Aidan and Carrie is all her fault, in my opinion. To make matters worse, she is calling Mr. Big (this is the stupidest thing she could do) like, all of the time, asking for his advice when it is so blatantly obvious that he wants her. There, I said it.

Whether or not this report will fully expose the He-man Secret Society of "Sex and The City" Watchers remains to be seen. But I can tell you this, they are practically everywhere. They fill your gas tank, they serve you food, they write you tickets when you aren't looking and who knows what they could do to you if you don't play your cards right.

Besides the fact that the show is awesome, men find another use for the show. We are constantly using it as a guide to helping figure out what the women in our lives are thinking. My girlfriend got mad at me the other day when I was watching the show and not paying attention to her but the entire time I was watching the show, I was thinking about her. I am constantly searching for similarities between the male figures on the show and myself. I wonder if my girlfriend has the same conversations that the four girls have. I wonder which girl on the show she relates to the most, or if she relates to none of them at all. In other words, try not to worry the next time you see the man (or men) in your life tuned in to "Sex and the City." It most definitely does not mean that he has you tuned out.

When In Manhattan... BY OLIVER PETERSON

Golden Gloves

I'm not much of a sports fan. Most of my life, I've sat quietly, listening to my friends and bar mates pontificating about the most recent football game or how many home runs were hit by the player de jour. Sports talk has always seemed to me to be a way for men to communicate when there's nothing else to say. Working in a store in East Hampton, I'm excessively subjected to commentary on the day's weather by an unending parade of customers. It's not that I don't like my customers, or even mind talking about the snow or the rain or how beautiful it is outside, it's just an observation that people aren't exactly creative with what they choose to discuss - although I wouldn't really call remarks on the weather a discussion. I'm guilty, too. Sometimes it seems the natural thing about which to speak. Conversations about sports, on the other hand, are mostly forced when the words fall stupidly from my lips. I remember certain genuinely exciting games, but mostly I've picked up a buzzword here or there that makes me seem a bit more informed than I actually am. There is, however, an exception. Boxing is one of my great loves. The combination of artistry, brutality and purity are unparalleled in any other game. It's unpredictable, but when everything falls into place, a good fight is a thing of beauty. I watch it, I talk about it, and I enjoy it for much more than the few verbal exchanges I have with fellow fans. Maybe it's the same for the guys who love the gridiron, but I'm incapable of relating. Right now in Manhattan, the other boroughs, and Long Island, the Golden Gloves amateur boxing tournament is in full swing. Many of the greats began here, and although it's only the preliminary rounds, you should be aware of what's happening now.

In what is now its 77th year, the Golden Gloves is the oldest and most-respected amateur boxing tournament in the world. Since March 28th, 1927, the tournament has launched the careers of many of our best boxers. The long list includes two-time world champion Mark Breland, Sugar Ray Robinson, Carl "The Truth" Williams, Kevin Kelley, Floyd Patterson, Sr., our local boy Gerry Cooney, Juan LaPorte, Hector "Macho" Camacho and the now tragic figure, Riddick Bowe. The Daily News is sponsoring the event, and early fights began Wednesday, January 26th at the Copacabana on West 34th Street. Fighters are coming from all around to battle in several weight classes. A win at the Gloves is the first step to beginning a professional career, but not everyone is fighting for a future in the sport. That's what is so great about boxing.

My friend, Mitch McMahon, is fighting the Wednesday before this article arrives in your hands. He's a writer and a smart guy and a decent boxer. It is my understanding that he's doing this for the love of the sport and personal challenge. He's training hard, and Mitch is just one of a large group of people doing the same thing. The Golden Gloves hosts a diverse cross-section of athletes with just as many reasons to fight. It's testing ground for champions as well as those who crave an unpolluted experience.

The Golden Gloves finals are April 7 & 8 at the Theater at Madison Square Garden at 8 p.m. Preliminary bouts will be continuing through the end of March at locations around the New York area. MetroTV coverage will air April 15th fights as a 2-hour telecast on Sat 5/1 at 8:00 p.m. April 16th fights air as a 2-hour telecast on Sat 5/8 at 8:00 p.m. Log on to www.usaboxingmetro.com or the New York City Sports Commission web site through www.nyc.gov for schedules and information.

Guild Hall's 13th Annual Student Arts Festival

Saturday, February 5, 2005 will mark the 13th Annual Student Arts Festival at Guild Hall in East Hampton. The collective works of talented students from local schools that include Montauk, Springs School, Amagansett School, John Marshall Elementary School, East Hampton Middle School, The Wainscott Common School, the Ross School, the Morriss Center, The Child Development Center of the Hamptons, Pierson High and Middle School, Sag Harbor Elementary School, the Bridgehampton School and Stella Maris will have on display.

This fun filled event affords students the opportunity to share their talents and hard work in varied media with an audience that includes many successful artists and professionals. Paintings, sculpture, printmaking, photography, video, and other multi-media works will be shown.

Director of Education Janet Goleas is excited for the festival. "This event is special because it represents a joyful and colorful bright spot in the dead of winter," she said. "There is everything from 3-dimensional artwork to very sophisticated photography."

The festival has evolved over the years and some students have participated several times, demonstrating more sophisticated works in later years. There have been several new additions and for the second year in a row, there will be a student video competition.

After all video submissions have been screened by a panel of judges there will be a 1st and 2nd prize awarded in each age category for Elementary, Middle and High School. Judges Josh Koury, Program Coordinator for the HIFF, Annett Handley-Chandler, Award-winning writer/producer of film, Mitchell Kriegman, Producer/Director/Creator of children's puppet shows for Disney and PBS, Billy Jett, of LTV and Janet Goleas, Director of Education for Guild Hall will have to decide on the winners. The winners will then be given awards and their films will be viewed on the big screen in the John Drew Theater. Perhaps we can witness first hand one our up and coming filmmakers of the next generation.

Whether we're being exposed to a new talent or an undeveloped skill, this student festival will definitely offer a much needed fresh and insightful perspective that will provide hours of entertainment.

Art is the greatest form of self expression. The significance of encouraging and developing hidden talents and skills for our children is an integral part of their educational experience. Art enriches our lives and has been proven to improve problem solving abilities and help children become more alert by expressing their ideas and feelings.

Come and join in the fun at the opening reception on Saturday, February 5th from 1 to 5 p.m. Artwork will be on display from February 5 through March 6, 2005. Admission is free during the month of February for children and adults.

—Kelly Krieger

theatre review: democracy...by gordin & christiano

We are saddened to report that the much-anticipated London import of the National Theatre's critically lauded production of the new Michael Frayn play, Democracy, does not live up to expectations. Some early reviews of the current Broadway staging of his political story of ideas were most favorable. Although we can appreciate his themes and the points he is making, as drama the evening doesn't add up and is a tedious bore.

Now, Mr. Frayn is the intelligent and gifted playwright who brought us Copenhagen, the psychological study of the physicists Neils Bohr and Werner Heisenberg, a few seasons back. He is a well-respected dramatist, but his story here, about Willy Brandt (James Naughton), West Germany's socialist chancellor from 1969 to 1974 and the East German spy Gunter Guillaume (Richard Thomas), who was his personal assistant, is an admirable failure. Brandt won the 1971 Nobel Peace Prize for his work in bringing the opposing forces of socialist East Berlin and democratic West Berlin together. Guillaume was partially responsible for Brandt's ultimate downfall and went undetected in his service probably because he developed a hero worship for Brandt who, although he didn't like him, found him useful as a sounding board.

Mr. Frayn is juggling an enormous amount of information in his attempt to create a Cold War spy thriller as well as a political drama about human nature. He has obviously immersed himself in the historical accounts of the real events, remaining close to the facts of the true story, but the results are not thrilling or even remotely dramatic. Not that he has failed on all accounts, but as living breathing theatre, the evening does not come to life. His account is all intellectual exposition without passion. He holds on to the facts so dearly that he neglects to flesh out the two characters at the heart of the story. They exist as little more than cardboard characters spouting clever words and endless exposition. This is frustrating to report because he certainly has the formula for a tantalizing play, but there is nothing engrossing or captivating about his characters, only the ideas.

The themes Mr. Frayn is exploring are indeed fascinating; the duality of the divided country in juxtaposition with the duality of the separated selves of the main characters, and the idea that democracy by its very nature is an imperfect system. Here we have the spy who is torn by his fascination with the man he has come to spy on and his loyalty to the political forces which oppose him. In addition there are the politicians attempting to liberate a country while struggling to maintain control of it. Thought provoking stuff and all the more interesting since the themes are grounded in actual events, but the passion of these real people, who inspired the play, has not found its way into the text. As a result the unfolding of the events lacks dramatic punch.

Mr. Frayn's device of using the spy, Guillaume, to describe what's going on to his socialist boss, Kretschmann (Michael Cumpsty) at a little table stage right that is meant to represent a coffee house only compounds the problem. As Guillaume moves from the table, where he describes what has just happened, back to Brandt's political offices where he further describes what is going on, we get yet more exposition. Mr. Thomas is saddled with the daunting challenge of attempting to bring life to a character who is forever stepping outside himself.

Faulting director Michael Blakemore with the play's failures seems somewhat unfair, as he has done some good work in staging the evening, but he too has been caught up in the intellectual exercise and has not inspired the actors to play any of the nuances inherent in the characters. His staging of the final scene in which the set collapses, signaling the fall of the Berlin Wall, is an ultimate cliché, which punctuates the evening's shortcomings. The framework is there, but without dramatic impact the play comes tumbling down as well.

Democracy is now playing at the Brooks Atkinson Theatre 256 West 47th Street. Tickets are available at the box office or www.ticketmaster.com or 212-3074100.

What the BLEEP do I give a BLEEPING BLEEP for the BLEEPING state of the wide-open, anything goes, say anything, do and show anything which you can see at your local homey, popcorn-scented picture show? It doesn't seem to bother others since they pay not inconsequential dollars to be bathed in it all. So, the things I regard as nasty appear to be very different from popular taste. I do not care for censoring. I can censor myself but, that's because if I don't, the newsmagazine will. However, what I object to tends to be considered as purely okay-dokey as Orville Redenbacher. Meet The Fockers objectionable? That notable "film critic," Larry King, has dubbed it, "A laugh riot . . . a pure delight." I walked away from it dismally derailed and in search of a shot or two of Pepto-Bismol (burp). Fraught with dyspepsia, I Scrooged my way through the dark streets thinking of the heavy dosage I'd had of unmitigated stereotyping. What everyone else in the audience laughed at convulsively burned my already irritated sensibility. I admit readily that Robert De Niro and, most especially, Dustin Hoffman and Barbra Streisand, as the Fockers, act the pants off their parts. Ben Stiller is Ben Stiller, as countless fans love him (he's reaching mega star status with the huge sales of Meet The Fockers since its opening in December and preceded by

Meet The Fockers

Starsky & Hutch, Dodgeball and Envy). Also convulsed in the laugh riot Fockers are Blythe Danner and Teri Polo who made their appearance in its predecessor, Meet The Family, four years ago. They are the nice, and mild as a quart of 2% milk, mother and daughter of the gentile family that Ben, the oddball, freaky alien wants approval from. Most of the laughs were derived from De Niro the father-in-law to be, a near-lethal CIA agent who puts Ben through a manic gauntlet of tests-landmines on the explosive road to the altar.

In this sticky-shticky follow-up we get to meet Ben's parents. We know this road is going to be at least as rocky because Ben is totally freaked-out - How will his too-Jewish parents pass the test? Oy! "Oy"? Yep, his parents, Roz and Bernie, utter this as naturally as if it's as close to their lips as Roz's loud lipstick. For folks living in present day Florida, they are as up to date as "Amos n' Andy." They could be their own parents, for gosh-sake! However, Hoffman and Streisand play their parts with a verve and joyousness that confounds me. (I understand that Ms. Streisand enjoys the ethnic funny, Funny Girl stuff off-camera but, Barbra - Fanny Brice entertained about 80 years ago). Roz is a sex therapist who gives senior Floridians a new lease on their condominium - confined lives. Very nice and even better, Roz and Bernie are heartfelt exuberant lovers and perhaps it is their happy work in this movie that pulls the audiences into the rank sequel. The Fockers tend to make you wonder how Ben came to be their son. The real life Ben Stiller has me off-kilter. His mom and dad, Anne Meara and Jerry Stiller, helped move us into the 20th century with their gentle humor of a mixed marriage's differences, but sameness of foibles.

All this mishegas (did I hear a BLEEP) is not too overlook Mr. De Niro, who has done a lot of time in stereotypical roles, many of which have been marvelous but had him lingering a little too long in Little Italy. Unfortunately, the malady lingers on.

MAYOR ED KOCH Goes To THE MOVIES

This movie, which has been out for several months, is still drawing the large audiences it deserves. I saw it on a recent Friday night, and the theater was nearly filled to capacity.

Hotel Rwanda is the story of the abandonment of the Tutsi tribe in Rwanda in 1994 by the African nations and the nations of the world, including the United States and the United Nations. The Tutsis, representing 15 percent of the country, were butchered remorselessly by the Hutu, the majority tribe. About 900,000 Tutsis were murdered before an invading Tutsi army from Burundi drove the Hutu into the Congo. A comparable fate at a different time overwhelmed the Tutsi of Burundi, a nation next door to Rwanda with the same tribal divisions.

The two tribes are often described as being different in appearance: the Tutsi are taller and tower over the shorter Hutu. According to the film, the colonizing

Hotel Rwanda (+)

Belgians viewed the Tutsi as more like Caucasians, identified more with them, and used them to govern the Congo during the period of colonization. When independence occurred, the Tutsi were favored by the government.

The movie depicts the true story of what one man, Paul Rusesabagina (Don Cheadle) did to save nearly one thousand lives. Paul is the manager of the Belgian-owned Hotel Des Milles Collines in the capital city of Kigali. He is a Hutu married to a Tutsi, Tatiana (Sophie Okonedo). When the killings begin, Paul hopes that the residents of his hotel will be protected by the United Nation troops, led by Col. Oliver (Nick Nolte), stationed in Rwanda as peacekeepers. He also relies on the protection of the Rwandan militia and military with whom he has curried favor over the years by bribing their corrupt officers. They protect the hotel only briefly, and when the killings begin, he and the Tutsi refugees and his hotel are at risk.

Cheadle's performance, as an ordinary man using his talents and ability to cajole, threaten, and bribe to keep the refugees and himself alive, is superb. He dominates the movie in every way. Ikonedo does a good job in her supporting role as his wife, and Nolte is fine in his secondary role as well. The horror and frenzy of the bloodshed come through in this film, but the viewer is not wrapped in gore. This is not a slasher film. Some of those who participated in the genocide are still awaiting trial in Rwanda. The movie is definitely worth seeing.

ART COMMENTARY With Marion Wolberg Weiss

THE ART SCENE: FAR FROM THE HAMPTONS Part IV: Washington, D.C.

The East End was very much represented during the holiday season at, of all places, Arena Stage. Located in Washington, D.C. and one of our country's most outstanding regional theatres, Arena offered the Tony Award-winning musical, Hallelujah, Baby, written and directed by local resident Arthur Laurents.

Yours truly has fond memories of Arena, recalling it from the 1950s when it was situated in a building called the Old Vat (as in wine). Arena was where I saw my first professional plays, although they had more in common with Off-Broadway productions than we realized – experimentation, innovation, risk-taking. It was there that new works were developed, like The Great Hope with James Earl Jones and Jane Alexander, new actors like Jon Voight cut their teeth, and a new structural configuration, a semi theatre-in-the-round, was established. I was fortunate to experience it all.

Hallelujah, Baby is not only a first-rate production with an extraordinary cast, but the play itself conjures up memories as well. While such recollections are critical rather than personal, they, nonetheless, suggest a thematic pattern in Mr. Laurents' writings.

For example, like his West Side Story, there is cultural/racial conflict between the lovers in Hallelujah, Baby. And in both plays there is a societal prejudice that continues to ring true. In Mr. Laurents' The Time of the Cuckoo and The Way We Were, the differences are less obvious perhaps, but conflict between cultural mores and political principles, respectively, propel the works' potent themes.

Georgetown Park, from the elevator

"Love does not conquer all" in Hallelujah, Baby, as in many of Mr. Laurents' endeavors. It's curious that, while his plots are romantic and often erotic, filled with unresolved passion, his endings are anything but idealistic.

Washington is not all about thought-provoking theatre during the holidays, however. My favorite neighborhood is Georgetown, and it was a pleasure, once again, to see the Christmas wreath hanging on the golden-domed bank, a landmark at the crossroads of M Street and Wisconsin Avenue.

A stay at my favorite hotel, The Latham, with its understated decor, warm lobby and abstract paintings in the rooms was like coming home for the holidays.

It's a short walk from The Latham to Georgetown Park, a shopping mall that still spells enchantment with its musical quartet playing in the courtyard. Riding the glass-enclosed elevator reinforces my experience with space at both MoMA and the Hotel Chelsea (detailed in the previous two Art Commentaries). Once again, vertical space, as I ascended the elevator, gave me a unique view of the elegant surroundings and a new appreciation of aesthetic elements like shape, composition and light.

Thank goodness Washington is not just about politics, but about art as well.

HONORING THE ARTIST: ELEANOR MEIER

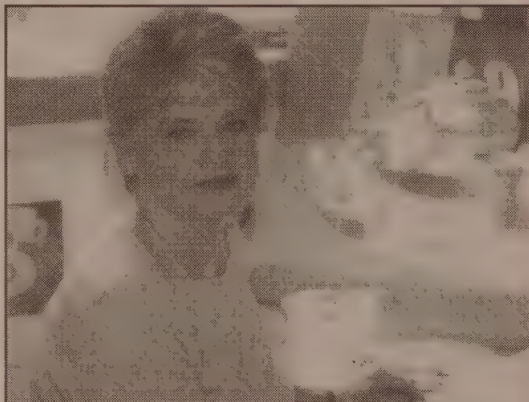

While Long Island artist Eleanor Meier is known for her still lifes like the one on this week's cover, it's interesting to note that her new series signifies a significant departure. As she tells it, her new series features plates and crockery that are jumbled together, images that are looking for "order-out-of-chaos."

"It's a political statement," explains Ms. Meier, referring to the current state of affairs in the United States.

The new series is different for other reasons. "The objects aren't mine," Ms. Meier says. "I found them going through my cousin's house after she passed away. I took what no one else wanted, but they're important to me because they represent family connections. This idea concerning order-out-of-chaos was also based on actual experience because as I was going through my cousin's stuff, I was trying to clean up and establish order."

If Ms. Meier's current series has political implications, her signature works represent the opposite end of the spectrum: they are personal and subjective. The objects are mostly from her own stash of everyday items, but they are still individualized, suggesting a story.

Asked about the narrative quality of her art, Ms.

Meier responds: "My things are based on family; each object is more than just an object. They are connected to the people who may have owned them."

Another important aspect of Ms. Meier's work is the idea of reflections. For example, she may use a bowl of oranges sitting on a glass table. It's intriguing to imagine that these literal reflections represent figurative ones as well. Thus, her objects "reflect" the familial bonds that are so salient to Ms. Meier.

The importance of family manifests itself in other ways, too. For example, Ms. Meier is obviously pleased about her recent summer trip to Italy with her grandsons, daughter and son-in-law. "It was so successful" she says, "that my older grandson has asked me to take him to Paris the next time."

Traveling together as a family is not a new experience for Ms. Meier. She regales us with memories of the time she and her husband took their two young daughters out of school to go to Europe for a whole year. We know that the girls did not suffer academically as a result, considering that Ms. Meier was an art teacher. When she talks about her former students of the past thirty-one years, in fact, we sense that she regards them as family as well.

Finally, there's the group of fellow artists that Ms. Meier has been meeting with once a week for twenty-five years. Now if that isn't a family, we don't know what is.

—Marion Wolberg Weiss

Ms. Meier will be in a group show, "Celebrating the Nude," starting Feb. 5, at Jefferson's Ferry. Call 631-650-2800 for information. Email Ms. Meier at: el.meier@worldset.att.net (as she's also excited about a recent honor she received from the Catharine Lorillard Wolfe Art Club).

Silvia Lehrer's Cooking Column

On Sunday, February 6, Americans everywhere will huddle up to their televisions to watch the battle for the championship ring. But Super Bowl Sunday is as much about hanging out with friends and eating fun food as it is about the game. Fun food could be anything that doesn't require elaborate preparation.

Invite your guests an hour or so before the game begins – to give everyone a chance to socialize, have a pre-game cocktail and a nibble, until the serious game viewers are ready to settle down in a comfy corner of the sofa or floor cushions in front of the TV.

Service is informal and buffet style, with foods that can be served at room temperature. Nothing that requires last minute preparation is the game plan. Chips and dips and nachos and cheese can always fit the bill for openers. Then make a big play of your own, with finger-licking good Chinese peanutty chicken wings, and an au courant Japanese vegetable salad. A winter fruit salad bowl with diced ripe pears, crisp apples, seedless grapes and orange segments deliciously dressed with a citrus flavored crème fraîche, golden raisins and chopped walnuts to tame and refresh the taste buds will bring in our own touchdown.

Let these culinary inspirations put you in the mood for count-down time.

JAPANESE VEGETABLE SALAD

An arrangement of vegetables, cut into thin sticks, is lightly dressed with sesame vinaigrette, Japanese style. The vinaigrette is attributed to Elizabeth Andoh, friend and colleague, and authority on Japanese cuisine. You can increase the vegetable and dressing ingredients to accommodate additional servings.

Serves 6-8

For the vegetables

- 2 carrots, trimmed and peeled
- 2 zucchini, scrubbed and trimmed
- 2 cucumbers, peeled and seeded
- 2-3 ribs celery, trimmed and washed well

Sesame vinaigrette

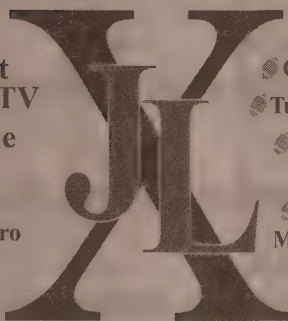

- 2 tablespoons Japanese rice vinegar
- 2 tablespoons water
- 2 tablespoons light miso (bean paste)
- 1 tablespoon soy sauce
- 1 tablespoon dark sesame oil
- 1 tablespoon white sesame seeds, toasted
- 1/4 teaspoon superfine sugar (optional)

For serving

- 1 bunch watercress, washed and spin-dried
- 1 cup bean sprouts

1. Cut carrots into halves or quarters lengthwise then cut into 2-inch length sticks. Repeat with zucchini, cucumber and celery. Be sure the vegetables are clean and dry before dressing with the vinaigrette. Can be prepared ahead and refrigerated, securely wrapped in plastic bags.

2. Prepare vinaigrette: In a bowl, combine all the ingredients, whisking lightly to ensure even distribution. Chill the dressing and use on vegetables or salad greens. Vinaigrette can be refrigerated in a suitable container for up to one week.

3. When ready to serve toss the vegetables with enough vinaigrette to coat them. Place the watercress, sprinkled with a bit of the vinaigrette, on a large platter and arrange the vegetables on top. Scatter the bean sprouts over the vegetables and serve.

CHINESE PEANUTTY CHICKEN WINGS

A platter of these crispy and flavorful wings garnished with scallion brushes makes a colorful and dramatic presentation.

Yield 36-40 pieces

18-20 chicken wings

Have on hand:

- 2 large foil baking pans
- Waxed paper

Marinade

- 1/2 cup soy sauce
- 1/4 cup dry sherry
- 1/3 cup hoisin sauce
- 1/4 cup plum sauce
- 1 bunch scallions, sliced thin
- 2 cloves garlic, finely chopped
- 1/4 cup rice vinegar
- 2 1/2 tablespoons honey
- 2 pods whole star anise, broken into pieces
- To finish: 1 1/2 cups unsalted peanuts, coarsely chopped

Scallion brushes for garnish, optional

1. Remove all excess fat and pinfeathers from chicken wings. Cut away and discard wing tips then cut through the second joint, so that you have two wing sections. Rinse clean and pat dry with paper towels.

2. In a small saucepan, combine remaining marinade ingredients and stir to mix. Bring to a boil over medium-high heat, then adjust heat and simmer for 5 minutes. Set aside to cool completely.

3. Place wings in a shallow glass dish (Pyrex or ceramic) and pour over the cooled marinade. Turn the chicken wings in the marinade to coat. Cover and refrigerate several hours or overnight.

Preheat oven to 375 degrees:

4. With tongs transfer wings to a disposable aluminum baking pan. (This is the only time I recommend using this type of pan for cooking. The sugars in the marinade would make for difficult clean up in a regular roasting pan.) Bake for 1 hour and 20 minutes, turning wings half way during the cooking. Baste with marinade every 20 minutes or so. When wings are a rich, dark color, remove from oven.

5. Spread chopped peanuts on a sheet of wax paper and roll each wing section in the chopped peanuts to coat evenly. Arrange on a serving platter a couple of hours before serving and garnish with scallion brushes, if using. Serve at room temperature.

WINTER FRUIT SALAD

The fruits of winter can indeed make an appealing dessert salad
Serves 6-8

For the fruit salad

- 2 navel oranges
- 3-4 ripe pears, preferably Comice or Bartlett
- 2 Golden Delicious apples, cored and diced
- 2-3 bananas, sliced
- 2 tablespoons lemon juice
- 1 1/2 cups seedless grapes

For the dressing

- 1/2 cup crème fraîche or sour cream
- 3 tablespoons undiluted frozen orange juice
- 2 teaspoons lemon juice
- 1/3 cup golden raisins
- 1/4 cup chopped walnuts

1. With a sharp paring knife, peel the oranges following the curve of the fruit and remove all the pith. Slice through between the membranes to remove the segments. Put segments into a bowl large enough to hold all the fruit.

2. Core and dice the pears and apples and add to the orange segments. Add the sliced bananas and sprinkle the fruit with lemon juice to keep them from darkening.

3. Mix together the crème fraîche or sour cream, orange and lemon juice; pour over the fruits and carefully toss to mix. Transfer to an attractive serving bowl. Mix together the raisins and walnuts and sprinkle over the top of the salad.

INTERIORS & EXTERIORS

The Garden At Rock Cottage by Lance Brilliantine

Wonderful Texture

The use of colors and textures that vary the palette, create points of fascination, enhance a garden's mood, and evoke interest is important in garden design. The advanced gardener is always on the lookout for plants that add depth and dimension to the landscape. One of the challenges, of course, is to select plants that create the right amount of textural contrast: too little contrast and a garden appears dull and undefined; too much contrast and the garden can appear rigid and unfriendly.

While many gardeners consider yuccas mundane, they are one of the best tools for adding contrast and texture. Many gardens have a yucca or two "stuck in" somewhere without thought. When thoughtfully used as an enhancement, the plants are of high value. The linear, evergreen foliage grows in lovely rosettes and offers year-round geometric effects and adds a rhythmic flow to the landscape. The tropical look and beautiful waxy flowers provide a theme that can be magnified successfully.

Yuccas grow naturally throughout the United States, but do not naturally exist in the northeastern United States. Species seen on the East End are cultivated. One reason is that the yucca has a symbiotic relationship with, and relies on, a particular moth (Tegeticula) for pollination. The moth does not survive northeastern winters. Interestingly, the yucca permits the moth's larvae to eat developing seeds to sustain itself generationally. In return, the moth pollinates the flowers so seeds can be produced.

Commonly called "Spanish Dagger" or "Bayonet Plant," all yuccas belong to the Agavaceae family of plants. There are more than 50 species in the U.S., and another 30 or so species throughout Latin America. In addition to the most commonly seen yucca (Yucca filamentosa), there are many unusual species that are successful for East End planting.

All species of yucca produce similar flowers – most appearing like three-sepaled bells consisting of three petals each. Because of this common design, the sepals and petals of yuccas are referred to as "tepals." "Tepals" vary in color from greenish-white, to creamy- or clear-white, to purple. While I have never tried them, the flowers are supposed to be edible and quite good in salads (several colleagues from Mexico indicate they use the emerging flower stalks in cooking).

Both the flowers and leaves are of interest in the garden. Leaves tend to be rigid and sharp, though some species have leaves that are pliable and floppy. Leaf ends may be sharp or blunt. Many species have marginal coloring and edges on the leaves that can be brown, yellow, or white. Margins may also be curved, curly, or serrated like a knife. Most edges of yucca leaves are sharp enough to cut the skin.

Yuccas are undemanding plants and survive best in marginally fertile, well-drained soil. In the northeast they require full sun, but can survive partial shade with fewer flowers. They do require that winters be somewhat dry, so do best with attention if they are to survive East End winters successfully. Once planted, yuccas prefer not to be disturbed, as the roots are delicate. Once established, the plants survive drought conditions quite well.

Yuccas are ideal as accent plants behind beds and borders or as special accents at the corners of borders. They are best when planted in clusters of three or more plants (odd numbers work better than even numbers). The plants should be given adequate room to tumble over and start new plants from their offshoots. Because the plants have sharp leaves, it is best to place them where people and pets won't be skewered or cut.

Some of the best species to look for that are also unusual include: Y. brevifolia – known as the Joshua Tree, it forms a trunked plant with short yellow-green foliage and whitish-green flowers (just beautiful); Y. pallida – wide, gray-blue foliage and white-green flowers; Y. shottii – forms a trunked, spiny, blue-leaved plant with creamy-white blossoms; Y. glauca – narrow,

A Superbowl Bash!

So you've decided to be the brave one of your circle of friends and throw the ultimate Super Bowl party at your house. Do you really want to allow a large group of football obsessed fans to express their heated emotions in your home? You might want to rethink the idea for a moment. Statistically, Super Bowl Sunday is America's top party occasion, even bigger than New Year's Eve. After Thanksgiving, it's the second largest day of food consumption in America. Okay, so if you are ready to make it your mission to throw the most memorable Super Bowl party ever, read on and learn some great ideas on how to have a safe and successful Super Bowl XXXIX party in your own home! Even if you have no interest in watching the two top football teams battle it out, the yearly ritual of coming together with friends and devouring good food is something almost every American has become accustomed to: So let's start with the basics, the invitations and decorations.

The invitations must be unique because your bash isn't the only one people will have the option of attending. You can shape them like footballs, or create ones that look like tickets to a football game. Tell your guests to arrive in their team colors or jerseys, while you dress for the occasion in a referee style shirt. Jazz up your home by putting a sign above your front door with your name as the stadium name. You can even order personalized shirts, so they will never forget where they were for Super Bowl XXXIX. Grab a piece of white chalk or tape to mark off the yard lines from the curb to your front door.

After you send the invitations and plan your decorations, decide what food you will serve your guests. If you're on a budget, opt for simple, traditional foods. Pizza, sandwiches, and chips and veggies with dip will most likely keep your friends content while they watch the anticipated event. However, if you are able to invest in this once-a-year football/food fest, why not have your party catered? You can pick-up or even have delivered a delicious variety of foods from any local caterer. There is one thing you will most likely have to go and pick up yourself... Alcohol. You can stock up on beer or you may choose to give your guests the option of mixed drinks as well. If you are going to offer cocktails, I strongly recommend hiring a bartender to mix and serve the drinks. It eliminates the mess, impresses your guests, and most importantly, it regulates the amount and pace at which your guests drink. Also, by hiring wait staff, you save yourself the hassle of setting up and cleaning up after your party. This is your party, and you wouldn't want to miss the game and the great commercials, while trying to maintain order in your home. Have you also forgotten what comes after Super Bowl Sunday?

Monday! Wouldn't it be great to say goodnight to your guests and get a well-rested night's sleep, instead of frantically working to bring your house back to the way it was?

The big day is now here, and your guests have arrived. Greet them at the door, grab their coats, and escort them in. For the well-known party drinkers, take their keys and let them know they are welcome to stay the night. Remember, it's your home and your responsibility to make sure your friends get home safely. Also, keep your guests eating, to decrease the chances of quick intoxication. The majority of the food should be situated around the TV. Obviously, that is where most of the traffic will be, and that gives you or your wait staff room in the kitchen to prepare and keep the food coming.

When the game is on or for those of us who are only waiting to see the big name advertisers' commercials, make sure you have plenty of seats. If possible have seats at different elevations to ensure premium viewing from your makeshift home stadium. Be prepared for happy and angry excitement, and move all fragile items to a different room. For those that couldn't care less about the game or the commercials (like small children), set them up in a separate area. Put on a movie or start up a card game for those who might just be there to eat and chat up the latest gossip while waiting for the game to end.

Kick-off for Super Bowl XXXIX is scheduled for February 6th, 2005 at 6:30 p.m. in Jacksonville, Florida. Check out Dan's Papers Service Directory for a great local caterer, experienced bartenders and wait staff, who will help keep your home in order and allow you to enjoy the big game.

Composting Your Waste

Sometimes I stand, eyes fixed on the sparkling water as rays of sunlight filter down, and I think I may in fact be in heaven. The East End of Long Island provides us with nature's bounty and, in so doing, is also one of the most beautiful places in the world. For all that this earth provides for us, it's important to occasionally give something back, or do something to maintain all that we have. There are massive movements to clean up beaches, to save the whales, and to protect our land.

These are all admirable pursuits. But if you feel that your life will not permit you with the time to devote yourself entirely to the cause of environmental preservation, that doesn't mean you can't do your part. There are simple, everyday ways in which you, too, can contribute to our great earth, which so selflessly provides us with such great wealth.

One simple way to contribute is to reduce your trash. Plastic bags do not have to be disposed of with every use. It is more economical and better for the environment to wash that plastic bag that you send with the kids to school. Or better yet, invest in some reusable containers, like Tupperware. Plastic bags are often not recycled, and therefore, they sit in our dumps for years, very slow to decompose.

Another excellent method of dealing with trash is by establishing a compost pile. Composting can easily be incorporated into your life, and it creates a win-win situation. You have less to carry to the dump, and you can also use the material in your compost heap as a fertilizer that will provide you with the best tomatoes in town.

Compost consists of partially decomposed organic material. By using it in gardening you increase plant growth. Particularly in the sandy soil that we have near the beaches, composting is helpful. Sandy soil generally has the problem of having loosely packed composition, which permits water and essential nutrients to drain too quickly from the soil. By infusing this soil with compost, you can slow down this process, allowing more nutrients to get to your plants, which will, in turn, strengthen the roots.

Compost consists of two types of materials: green matter and brown matter. Green matter includes any non-meat table scraps, like cucumber peels or apple cores, as well as grass clippings and manure of any herbivore. Brown materials, like leaves, paper, and straw or hay can also be used in compost piles. They should, however, be used more sparingly. During the composting process, tiny microorganisms like bacteria and fungi process the materials, releasing and absorbing the nutrients within. You can see the effectiveness of composting in the fact that, by the end of the process, your compost pile will be about half as large as it was when you began. Then, the remainder of the pile, which takes about six months to be prepared, can be used as a fertilizer.

To begin a compost pile, designate either a space or a bucket to be used. In a home garden, it may be about 3 feet high and 3 feet wide. Stack the materials on top of each other in layers, separating with layers of dirt to increase air circulation. Add nitrogen in the form of manure, greenery, or a nitrogen powder.

This adds heat to the compost, which will cause rotting and also kill any unwanted bacteria. Now add water, just enough to dampen the pile. Cover the compost heap and let nature run its course!

There is no danger of adding too much compost to your garden. It is completely beneficial to the soil and it will allow much of the waste that we haul to the dump every week to be used in a more efficient manner. We have been given this world as a gift and the only stipulation is that we have to take care of it. I'd much rather gaze out upon the sparkling Atlantic Ocean than the rolling mountains of the East Hampton Town Dump.

Beautiful Furnishings That Make Sense

"Extremely Durable." "Easy to Maintain." "Hypoallergenic." "Antimicrobial." "Environmentally Conscious."

These are not words that leap to mind when thinking about interior design. And yet, they are the benchmarks for some of the newest interior design products on the market today. In fact, one might say they herald the "Coming of Age" of Interior Design.

Finding a compromise between having a beautiful home and living in one has always been a challenge and there have been many interesting solutions. Some people decorated and then refused to use the living or dining rooms. Others covered their furniture with sheets. Many parents decided to "wait 'til the kids grow up." And some poor souls threw caution to the wind, decorated their homes, and watched in horror as their new furnishings were ruined by the drip of an ice cream cone, the piddle of a puppy, or a dropped glass of red wine.

So what if we told you that now you can have a home that is absolutely beautiful AND easy to live in?

But how can this be possible??? Amazingly, we have the healthcare industry to thank.

Until recently, interior design materials were manufactured for either residential OR commercial use. Residential fabrics, wall coverings, and floor coverings were made to be beautiful and diverse, giving designers unlimited opportunities to create wonderful interiors for their clients. Unfortunately, most of these products were also fragile, easily stained and expensive.

On the other hand, Commercial interior design products were just the opposite: durable, easily maintained, and less expensive. However, "contract materials" (as they are known in the design industry) were also... aesthetically challenged, to say the least.

An interesting thing happened about ten years ago. Things started to change, particularly in the healthcare market. The world had become more sophisticated; patients could choose where they wanted to go for care. Increased competition forced hospitals to be more "user friendly" and hospitals realized that they had to look a lot better if they were going to attract (and keep) new patients. "Healing environments" became de rigueur, and "beautiful" suddenly became much higher on the list of priorities.

Unfortunately, creating a good look while still meeting the rigorous demands of life in a hospital wasn't easy for designers who specialized in this type of work. There wasn't much in the way of design materials to work with. Synthetic fibers were shiny, stiff, and uncomfortable. Furniture was geared toward function, but hardly towards form. Patterns were unheard of, and color choices ranged from gray and beige to the dreaded mauve.

So healthcare designers with a greater vision (and a need to please their clients) began to demand better products. They pleaded. They begged. And manufacturers began to listen. Slowly, they figured out how to make design materials that looked and worked better.

They developed "super fabrics" that were increasingly durable and stain resistant, and found a way to make "solution dyed" carpet fibers that kept their color even if cleaned with bleach. Formica® type products were replaced by solid surfacing materials that didn't chip. Colors and patterns that were unheard of in the commercial design world began to emerge. And when designers in other specialty markets such as restaurants and hospitality (hotels, motels, and public spaces) became aware of these new products, they wanted them as well. As the demand grew, so did the manufacturers' response.

Today, there are thousands of exciting new durable, stain resistant, and easily maintained fabrics, furniture, and furnishings in styles that range from the coolest in contemporary to the most elegant in traditional. And, in response to a growing emphasis on the world's health and safety, these beautiful materials are now also intrinsically hypoallergenic, antimicrobial, antifungal, antibacterial, and environmentally conscious.

Interior Designers now have the resources and the ability to blend cutting edge technology with the finest in classic design creativity interiors that are beautiful, usable, and healthy to live in. So go ahead, put your feet up on the couch, let the kids back in the living room, and cuddle with your pet wherever you want. Because now you can.

spiky grey-green leaves and creamy, light-scented flowers; Y. elata - a dense rosette of pencil-thin foliage and giant panicles of fragrant flowers on a trunk of up to 10 ft tall; and Y. aloifolia - producing sharply spiked leaves on a shorter trunked plant with white, purple-tinged flowers.

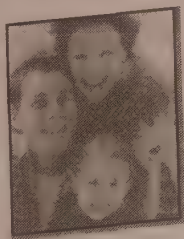

As we started experimenting with yuccas, we purchased only three plants. Propagation has been easy by cutting off portions of the trunks or separating offshoots and planting them in new locations. Over the last seven years our collection of yuccas has grown to more than a dozen plants.

While some gardeners overlook this textural plant, it needs to be considered as an important factor in every garden landscape.

Uncle Sam's Helpful Hints to Being Fit and Trim

The 2005 American Dietary Guidelines have been released. Every five years, the government gives us fresh information on how to eat and live right. No surprise the report says we don't eat enough fruits and vegetables, nor do we get enough exercise.

What is surprising is there has been a significant increase in the quantities of what we should be consuming and the length of time we should be exercising. This is incredible, since most of us fall short of the old 2000 guidelines that recommended eating just three to five servings of fruits and vegetables a day. It also suggested putting in a minimum of 30 minutes of moderate activity.

Now, we are supposed to devour nine servings of fruits and vegetables per day. To avoid gaining weight or to sustain weight loss, the guidelines say do 60-90 minutes of heart pumping exercise.

I ask you, who can do this? Who has time to eat right? Who can prepare 4 cups each of veggies and fruits a day? For that matter, who has the energy to work out for an hour and half? Clearly, whoever came up with these guidelines does not have a job, a life, or children.

I am all for being healthy and decided in the spirit of the New Year, I would try and commit to the guidelines. Who better than I to give it a shot and see if they were even remotely achievable? I am single. I work from home. I am the perfect candidate. And I failed.

First off, one has to really plan on how one is going to chow down nine servings of fruit. I tried dried apricots (1/4 cup equals one serving), a glass of juice (1/2 cup is a serving) and then forgot about it until bedtime when I had to chug down more juice to make up for what I hadn't consumed throughout the day and was up all night.

As for vegetables, I decided on two salads and then broccoli as a side dish to accompany the measly 5.5 ounces of protein allowed each day. I was having broiled fish and it looked pretty puny on the plate.

Preparing food is fine on the weekends when I have time to clean, cut and manage all preparations. While I do work from home, I spend a lot of time traveling in and out of the city attending meetings. Upon returning home, all I want to do is swing open the refrigerator door and have the meal magically appear. When that doesn't happen, I order Chinese.

I tried to beef up my veggie intake by nibbling on carrots, but fell for temptation in the shape of tried to break it up by taking a 60 minute cardio blast class and then doing a half hour walk on the beach. It was wonderful, but I was late for a conference call.

Determined, the next day I awakened at 5 a.m. and yanked the dog out of bed to go running. It was more of an awkward trot and we only lasted for 45 minutes. I felt great and was showered and sitting at the computer by 9 a.m. At noon, I was asleep on the keyboard.

The Guidelines also stress more whole grains, such as whole wheat and brown rice. I love bread, but 7 to 11 servings (at one slice per) packs on pounds that I can't get off because I don't have the time or stamina to work out for 90 minutes.

The guidelines offer helpful hints, such as taking more stairs. Unless the elevator is broken, there is no way I could hike up stairs for an hour and half.

The guidelines also offer a cheap disclaimer that says its suggestions are "optimum" but for whom? Oprah? Who else can hire a fulltime chef and work out for 60-90 minutes every day?

So, until I win the lottery, my exercise is limited to walking to the car. As for eating right...do you think the olives in martinis count as a fruit or vegetable?

a low fat blueberry muffin. Secretly, I hoped this could somehow translate into a fruit ration.

Still struggling with how to manage to eat all the required good stuff, I decided to relieve some of the bloat by heading to the gym for my daily dose of exercise. Five minutes on a treadmill seemed like a lifetime. 15 minutes was torture. I

Eating And Exercising For Longevity

Recently I found myself getting into a tough space and I put on more weight than I have ever put on in my life, 20 to 30 pounds, up to 170 pounds. In college, I found that weighing between 138 and 148 to be most efficient to row crew. All those hours on the water brought my weight down, in spite of eating a lot in the U-Mass cafeteria, usually two servings at breakfast, right after practice. I ate chicken and fish at that time and did not eat beef or pork. These past few months I found myself eating everything that came my direction, chicken, beef, pork, cake, and, unfortunately too many candy bars. This three meal a day lifestyle with king size candy bars put me up at 170 lbs even after I switched to eating vegetarian again, while doing yoga.

This last week I remembered what a yoga teacher told me while I was at the Sivananda Ashram in Grass Valley, CA. Chlorophyll is one molecule different than blood. The green in lettuce and spinach created by photosynthesis is "like a blood transfusion." Tagus, the teacher, and his girlfriend ate green salads for brunch and dinner (Sivananda has two meals a day) while we ate large amounts of vegetarian hot curries, salads, and fruits and vegetables. After leaving Sivananda, I spent some time south of there in Auburn, CA, where I practiced yoga once a day and stopped at the local grocery store. One day, in the organic food section, I picked up a head of green leaf lettuce and just ate it walking down the street. Another time I ate it just sitting in Starbucks, committed to the Sivananda hindu way of life. They cooked vegan except for some milk products. I was drinking Starbucks soy milk, and hiking back to my hotel, picking fresh oranges from a local tree. For breakfast I ate peanut bars or fig newtons from the local gas station minimart and then at brunch and dinner, a head of lettuce. I figured since it came organic, no need to wash it. I did not check my weight at that time but I think I was between 150 and 160. I left Auburn after a week. That was almost a year ago. Recently to do something about my weight I went back on the green leaf diet, and find myself eating one plate of iceberg salad with a little bit of beans, tomatoes, green peppers, and tomato for topping. I do not use dressing and already I am down at 160 pounds, having lost 10 pounds.

I was thinking about calling one of these weight product companies, Hydroxycut, that recently aired a commercial where a couple showed their before and after. I was thinking about seeing if they need another actor to show how much weight he or she'd lost. Then I realized why not just write something helpful for Dan's Papers and show my before and after pictures. By the time this comes out, I should be down to 150 pounds, having lost 20 pounds, closer to my college 145 lightweight crew weight. My diet is not Jenny Craig, is not Weight Watchers, is not Slim Fast, Hydroxycut, Cortislim, or Atkins. I learned it at a yoga ashram in northern California, and it involves eating just raw salads for lunch and dinner and something petite for breakfast like oatmeal and raisins (just one bowl). Remember, we are made up of flesh, just like a cow or horse. Our muscles are very similar. Just like they can live off grass we can live off green leafy salads. I saw on TV the other day a supermodel in her late thirties insisting on eating raw and she lost many pounds. "We take the vitamins and minerals out of food when we cook it," she explained.

My recipe for you is the following:

Half a head of organic lettuce (type and organic or not is your choice) and half a bunch of spinach. Water. No dressing. It's very simple, but since we can't all do heavy sports like crew it's a great way to lose weight. Tagus and his girlfriend are skinny and proud. This may not be for everybody, but I have learned to discipline myself, so I too, am in better shape eating this salad diet. Good Luck!

If you can get to the yoga mat at least once a day, you might feel like trying this diet, as Hindus are known to do yoga and are vegetarian. Look up yoga in the yellow pages and there are plenty in the Hamptons. If you can find a studio that has classes twice a day you can have your own little ashram way of life and go to class and eat right.

NOT TO BE COMBINED

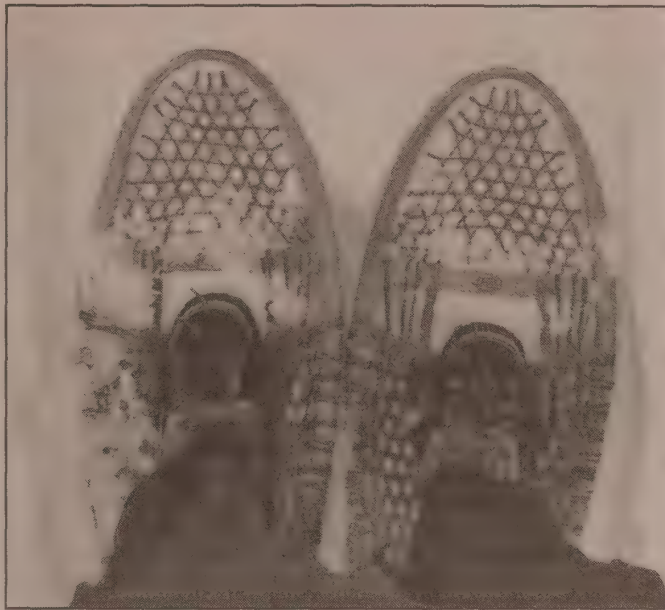

HEALTH, BEAUTY & FITNESS

One, Two, Snowshoe

The roads are icy, the sidewalks are non-existent and you're thinking it's about time to hang up those walking shoes until the thaw. But the winter doesn't mean the end of athletics. It also doesn't mean being confined inside. It simply means you have to become a little more creative about how you exercise. A great way to get the heart pumping and the legs going is snowshoeing. The hiking trails you enjoy all summer weave through the woods year-round; the only difference is that they may be covered in fifteen inches of snow. Not a problem. That's what snowshoes were invented for in the first place.

Although recreational snowshoeing has only been around for about thirty years, snowshoes have been around, seemingly, forever. Originally nothing more than planks of wood, snowshoes were an absolute necessity in ancient Central Asia. Eventually the technology changed and the planks were replaced by white ash frames laced with animal gut or rawhide. Much lighter than their predecessors, these snowshoes became the most common mode of transportation in deep snow throughout North America.

In the 1960s the snowshoe would evolve once again when neoprene lacing was introduced as an alternative to the rawhide. The benefit of neoprene was that it did not stretch like rawhide and it did not require shellacking at the end of each year to maintain its strength. In 1972, Gene and Bill Prater created the aluminum framed-snowshoe. Less cumbersome and much lighter than the traditional wooden snowshoe, these new shoes helped open the door to recreational snowshoeing and the snowshoeing industry. Since then other advancements have come about, making snowshoes even easier to wear and maneuver, making snowshoeing a much more approachable sport for the novice.

Unlike summer sports where the correct apparel simply means matching whites, for snowshoeing the proper clothing is the difference between a great day in the snow and hypothermia. Long underwear is a must. Most would recommend a pair made from synthetic polypropylene because it will wick moisture away from your body and keep heat in. Synthetic and/or synthetic and wool blended socks are generally the proper choice to keep the feet warm. Avoid cotton because once it gets wet, it will do more harm than good.

A fleece works well as a middle layer. Cover up with wind and waterproof pants and jacket. It's also a good idea to pack an extra layer or two in a backpack in case you need additional warmth. Obviously you'll need gloves or mittens and a warm hat. It's not a bad idea to also wear sunglasses or goggles because the sun's glare can make snowshoeing a chore instead of fun.

When buying snowshoes, don't just buy the most expensive pair. Try a few different types and styles. Although wooden shoes are still available, aluminum shoes are generally the way to go. They are technologically more advanced than their wooden parents and have numerous amenities (including step-in and easy release bindings) that give them an edge. Speak to your local merchant about which shoes are better for the East End's snow conditions. Larger shoes usually work better on dry, powdery snow and smaller shoes do well on packed trails. An additional factor in choosing the right shoe is your weight (which includes the weight of anything else you may be carrying, such as a backpack).

Boots are also very important. Again it is best to speak to the salesperson about what to buy. Some snowshoes only work with specific boots, while others are more versatile. Your boots should be waterproof, insulated and comfortable. Remember when trying them on that you will be wearing thick socks on the trails, so don't wear a pair of fancy argyles to the store.

Poles can be very helpful when hiking up hill or adding strength when you are carrying a heavy pack or pulling a sled. They also make for a good upper body workout.

If possible go snowshoeing with a friend or two. You are heading out into the cold woods, after all. If something were to happen, it would be better to have someone around to help you. If not, leave a plan, similar to when sailing, listing where you are going and when you will be back. Pack a cellphone. And bring water. Although you are outside, you are exercising and expelling a good deal of water, so it's extremely important to stay hydrated. Throw a Powerbar or some fruit in your bag as well. The added energy will help you get through the tough spots.

Now that you're ready to get out there, speak to local outdoor stores to find out if there are any specific snowshoeing trails or head out on the trails you've walked for years. Talk to the wineries and see if they'd be willing to let you walk among the vines or even head down to the beach and traverse the snowdrifts.

Real Estates by Diane Strecker

On Shelter Island where there is not a broker sign to be found, one must look on line or stop into local realtors to see what homes are on the market. It is the only East End community with a 100-year-old ordinance that prohibits broker signs on properties. Shelter Island in winter is quiet with only a few restaurants and merchants open for business. It is connected to Greenport on the north side and Sag Harbor and North Haven to the south. The ferry ride takes only a minute but puts you in another world. The island is a naturalist's dream, with hundreds of acres of preserved land and an Island all its own; Ram Island. It has all the makings of a quaint seaside town and offers the peace and serenity of unspoiled waters and landscape. It is filled with historic homes that have been in families for generations. One Shelter Island resident told me about her home in Shelter Island Heights that was built by her grandmother well over 100 years ago, and like this one, many of these homes were built for what would be considered pennies today and can now sell for millions. Historic homes in Shelter Island Heights rarely come on the market and when they do, they are literally scooped up by anxious buyers.

Some high profile estates are currently for sale there and some have sold recently, such as Billy Joel's waterfront mansion on 1.5 acres. That estate included a private beach and dock and was listed for $4.9 million and sold close to asking price.

Facing Coecles Harbor on Shelter Island is an English country manor now on the market. The home is just less than 6000 sq ft and style with a screened porch wrapping entirely around. It has two master suites, a heated pool, a barn and a dock out on the bay. It is listed for $6,950,000 with Allan M. Schneider Associates.

Also on the Island is a $550,000 1910 renovated farm house with 4 bedrooms, 1.5 baths and a barn, near the beach and golf. Homes in this range are rarely found anywhere in the current market. It is listed with the Corcoran Group.

Facing Gardiner's Bay and Coecles Harbor you can buy a 2300 sq ft beach house. This one has a double living room with a stone fireplace. Decks wrap around the entire one story structure and there are views from every room. It is listed with Fredrick L. Dinkel on Shelter Island for $3,500,000.

Summer rentals on the Island are already underway where many returning summer residents rent the same place each year. Some seasonal residents consider these homes "theirs" as they have been returning for so long. You can rent a picture perfect Victorian in the village for $70,000 this season. Or you can rent it individual months, for $25,000/June, $30,000 for July or $35,000/August. The historic home is on about a third of an acre, has lush gardens and overlooks a meadow. It has 6 bedrooms and 3.5 baths, a formal parlor, a rocking chair porch and a heated pool out back. Listed with Allan M. Schneider Assoc.

You can reach Diane at eastendrealest@aol.com

includes two acres of land with more than 200 feet of waterfront and 125 feet of deep water docking. It has a two story grand entry, 4 bedrooms and 6 baths; a heated pool, theatre, gym and library.

And on 27 acres there is the historic Cackle Hill. This hilltop estate faces West Neck Bay. The turn of the century home is a spacious farm

HELP ON THE WAY?

Dear Dan,

Hi my name is Ebony Brown. I'm a recent graduate from Five Towns College with a Bachelor's in Business Management. I'm also a struggling model and singer. I'm sitting here thinking of the massive disaster of the human lives lost; and I'm just thinking of wealth in America that makes millions of dollars. From the actors, athletes, musicians, politicians, president and vice president all the way down, Wouldn't it be a beautiful thing if each multi-millionaire could donate one million dollars each to the Red Cross and other relief organizations? Because of the shortage of water, supplies, and the thousands of people dead or injured. Wouldn't that be a humanitarian thing to do not only for America, but also for the world?

This just shows that America is a democracy and it gives us the freedom to do great things. It will set a precedent if the president and vice president both being multi-millionaires will give their personal wealth and not from the government. It also shows that we're giving from the heart and encouraging others to do the same.

Maybe you printing this letter will answer my prayers. Thank you.

LET'S HEAR IT FOR THE DEMOCRATS

Dear Dan,

For those of us who have the great privilege of living in the Hamptons, I for one do not take my freedoms lightly.

For that reason I wish to thank Senator Barbara Boxer and Representative Stephanie Tubbs Jones, and others congressional leaders who, in the face of a patronizing, hostile and disrespectful Republican majority, did our country a service by speaking out and demanding that we protect each citizen's right to vote.

Happy 2005!

THANKS FOR THE MEMORIES

Dear Dan,

In the Authors Writing About the Hamptons column a couple of months ago, you featured a few pages from a book entitled The Fig Pluckers by V. Dennis Wrynn.

Since my wife and I were dating in the Hamptons and Manhattan during the late 1960s, I bought the book from the authorhouse.com. I have to say that this book accurately describes the social scene, as I knew it. It brought back many memories of the wonderful times and adventures we had. I really enjoyed it, and I want to thank you for bringing this book to my attention.

LAND ROVER TAKING ON A LIFE OF ITS OWN

Dear Dan,

I enjoyed your article about your new Land Rover. However, let me give you the lowdown on your new vehicle. First, let me say I'm very fond of Land Rovers, and in fact owned a 1987 model, which was the first model year they were imported into the United States. Range Rover, the company, has always been nice to me, letting me drive their press cars many times at their off road events. But, and it's a big but, Land/Range Rovers have the age-old British problem of electrical gremlins, since the early fifties.

You know the old joke about the Lucas electrical system used in all British vehicles: "WHY DO THE BRITISH DRINK WARM BEER? BECAUSE THEY ALL HAVE LUCAS REFRIGERATORS." As the cars have gotten more sophisticated over the year, they have gotten more problematic. The previous model to yours, the "Discovery" is so notorious for breakdowns, that it has one of the worst resale values of any SUV. Also of note is that the previous model Range Rover with an air bag suspension had so many problems with the airbags, that Range Rover makes a kit to replace the airbags with springs. Two words of advice: Enjoy your new car...pretend your a British Royal and wave to people from your high leather bound perch and keep a Toyota SUV as a back up in the garage when you want to go more than twelve miles per hour.

PS: Rover probably got the bugs out of the new one, despite your grief!

Best regards.

Bob Gelber

COLLEGE SUPPORT

Dear Dan,

It's Friday, January 21 at 11:45 and I'm reading page 19. I feel sad. Southampton College is a great school, filled with dreams and hopes.

I graduated from there in 1989 - BFA - I was forty-four years old. It was the most fulfilling years of my life, a chance to study the arts of my life with great people, Bob Skinner, Robert Munford, Yuoushi and Zuchner to name a few.

Danielle Zahm is the kind of students that Southampton College births and raises. She is one of the children that we can all be proud of.

Three must be rich people out there that can see this value and "Help". Help save our future.

With fondest regards for all your papers' efforts.

Police Blotter

Bank Card Is Ticket To Arrest. A Calverton man was "held up" in his attempt to pull off this get-cash-quick scheme. Armed with a forged business check from a Greenport business that he presented along with an ATM card, he withdrew $4,200 from the business' bank account, only to be arrested by Southold Police shortly thereafter.

* * *

Calvin Clean(ed). Fiendish fashionistas made a sleek sweep at the Calvin Klein store in the Tanger Outlet Center located in Riverhead. According to Riverhead Town Police reports, nearly $200,000 in merchandise was stolen between June and December. The clothing heist was discovered as a result of an inventory check.

* * *

She's A Very Freaky "Girl" With Some Very Sticky Fingers. Police are following up on this case of "he-she" identity. A man dressed as a woman knocked on the door of a male acquaintance and asked for help. The resident obliged and let "her" in so that "she" could change clothes in a spare bedroom. After his guest left, the homeowner noticed that a camera, watch, cash and CD player were missing.

* * *

Looted While Shopping. While the owner was stocking up on provisions at the IGA Supermarket on North Main Street in East Hampton, someone stole $515.23 worth of lumber from the top of a car parked in the market's lot.

* * *

Brawl-dy Hall. Repeat after me...the bartender is always right! Apparently, one such hooch hound found this out the hard way. It seems a verbal altercation broke out between this besotted soul and the bartender at Rowdy Hall restaurant on Main Street in East Hampton. The bloke ended up being charged with disorderly conduct.

* * *

Stuck On Ice? The mobility of the Town Pond swans weighed heavy upon a concerned citizen. So heavy, he phoned authorities to report his concerns. Officers were dispatched to check the situation and found the birds were moving swimmingly.

* * *

Shattered Glass - Part II. It seems a harebrained hunter might have been responsible for an errant shotgun shell that shattered the living room window of a Prospect Hill Road home in Montauk. Betcha' he's counting the days until the end of shotgun season.

No Safe Place. There was a time not too long ago when a safe was considered a sure bet, a trusty place to keep one's valuables. Alas, not any more. The rash of safe-cracking burglaries seems to have started up again. The safe at Wolfer Vineyards in Sagaponack was burgled. The perp entered the winery's main building and forced open the door to the manager's office. Once inside, he or she jimmied the floor safe and made off with $2,100 in cash.

* * *

Pee Wee's Misadventure. Southampton Town Police arrested a Northampton fellow for making yellow snow near the Gulf Gas Station at the Peconic Traffic Circle in Riverside. The pesky peeper punched an officer who was attempting to arrest him, which netted him charges of resisting arrest, disorderly conduct and harassment.

* * *

Oops...You Forgot Something. According to police reports, a thief broke into the Plitt Ford office on Montauk Highway. He gained entrance by breaking a window. Once inside he made off with $250, but left something behind. His glove.

* * *

Electrified Situation - All Is A Buzz. Two meters worth about $80 each disappeared from Revco Electric Supply on Gingerbread Lane in East Hampton. The manager reported the missing equipment and told East Hampton police that he suspects an employee nabbed them and then sold the items to an electrical contractor.
